Introduction

General remarks

The Yogatattvabindu is a premodern Sanskrit Yoga text on Rājayoga that was written in the first half of the seventeenth century¹ in northern India.² The most salient feature of the work that makes it historically significant is its highly differentiated taxonomy of types of Yoga. In the Yogatattvabindu's introduction, most manuscripts name fifteen types of Yoga, presented as subtypes of Rājayoga. The text is a yogic compendium written in a mix of mainly prose and 41 verses in textbook-style, where its 58 topics are introduced in sections launched by recognizable phrases. Most sections deal with the subtypes of Rājayoga and their effects, but others also cover topics like yogic physiology and cosmogony.

The Yogatattvabindu has not been discussed or considered in secondary literature on Yoga. The only exception is BIRCH (2014: 415–416) who briefly described its list of fifteen Yogas in the context of the “fifteen medieval Yogas” and noted that a similar³ list occurs in Nārāyaṇatīrtha's Yogasiddhāntacandrikā (17th – 18th century), a commentary on the Pātañjalayogaśāstra that integrates almost an identical taxonomy of yogas within the aṣṭāṅga format. An incomplete account of the fifteen Yogas is found within the Sanskrit Yoga text Yogasvarodaya, which is known only through quotations in the Prāṇatoṣinī and Yogakarnīkā.⁴ The Yogasvarodaya provides a total of fifteen Yogas but names only eight of them in its introductory *śloka*s. A complete account of the text is yet to be found and might be lost forever. The Yogasvarodaya is the primary source and template for the compilation of the Yogatattvabindu. Rāmacandra closely follows the content and structure by rewriting the Yogasvarodaya's *śloka*s into prose. Due to the incomplete transmission of the Yogasvarodaya, Rāmacandra's Yogatattvabindu is a natural and valuable starting point for an in-depth study of the taxonomy of the fifteen types of Yoga. The other source text that ¹The dating of the text is discussed on p.5.

²The detailed discussion of the place of origin is found on p.??.

³My research suggests that list of fifteen Yogas in Nārāyaṇatīrtha's Yogasiddhāntacandrikā must be chronologically later than the ones found in the Yogatattvabindu and its sources. As I will show in the discussion of the fifteen Yogas on p.??, we have to assume that Nārāyaṇatīrtha saw the need to map the fifteen Yogas onto system of the Pātañjalayogaśāstra due to their popularity among practitioners in his sphere of activity.

⁴Manuscripts under the name of Yogasvarodaya seem to be lost. I was not able to allocate the manuscripts of the text in any manuscript catalogue at hand.

Rāmacandra used is the Siddhasiddhāntapaddhati whose content he draws on, particularly in the last third of his composition. Another text that includes a similar taxonomy of twelve Yogas divided into three tetrads is Sundarāś's brāj bhāṣa Yoga text named Sarvāṅgayogapradīpikā which not just shares most of the types of Yogas but also many of the practices and contents found within the Yogatattvabindu and Yogasvarodaya.⁵

These complex taxonomies that emerged during the 17th and 18th centuries crossed sectarian divides and were adapted to the specific needs of different authors and traditions. The Yogatattvabindu thus encapsulates the diversity of Haṭha- and Rājayoga types and teachings after the Haṭhapradīpikā (15th century) that were adopted by a broad spectrum of religious traditions and strata of Indian society. In the particular case of the Yogatattvabindu, there are various statements throughout the text that reveal a strategy to detach Yoga from its renunciate connotations and to enforce the supremacy and universality of Rājayoga as a practice that can yield the highest benefits even for practitioners who enjoy worldly pleasures and an extravagant lifestyle. Textual evidence suggests the possibility that Yogatattvabindu may be a unique example of a Rājayoga text that was composed for warrior aristocracy and members of an royal court.

In addition, the analysis of the Yogatattvabindu and the historical retracing of its teachings provides insight into a complex network of at least twenty texts,⁶ all of which include one specific set of yoga theorems and practices with minor deviations - three to five cakras, sixteen ādhāras, two to five lakṣyas, and five vyomas. This intertextual network spans at least an entire millennium. It begins in early śivaite Tantras such as the Netratantra and ends in the large premodern Yoga compendiums like the Haṭhatattvakaumudī and Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā. The examination of this network provides insights into the history of the related yoga traditions and enables, for example, the reconstruction of the genesis of individual yoga categories mentioned in the fifteen Yogas, ⁵For a comparative table of the complex Yoga taxonomies see table ?? on p.??.

⁶This intertextual network which shares those specific teachings consists of the Netratantra, Śāradatilakatantra, Sarvadurgatipariśodhanatantra, Ūrmikaṭārnāvatāntra, Tantrāloka, Manthanabhairavatantra, Śārngadhārapaddhati, Vivekamārtanḍa, Śivayogapradīpikā, (recensions of the Haṭhapradīpikā), Amaraughaśāsana, Yogasvarodaya, Sarvāṅgayogapradīpikā, Nityanāthapaddhati, Siddhasiddhāntapaddhati, Yogatattvabindu, Yogacūḍāmaṇyupaniṣad, Maṇḍalabrāhmaṇopaniṣat, Haṭhatattvakaumudī and Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā.

such as Lakṣyayoga, whose techniques were originally taught in early śivaite Tantras, but were only labeled as a separate type of yoga from the 17th century onwards.

One printed edition of the Yogatattvabindu was published in 1905 with a Hindi translation and based on an unknown manuscript(s). This publication has the title 'Binduyoga' confirmed by the printed text's colophon. However, as I discuss in the course of the introduction, the text was likely known as Yogatattvabindu. The consulted manuscripts contain significant discrepancies, structural differences and variant readings between them and the printed edition. Furthermore, the manuscripts are scattered over the Indian subcontinent, which suggests that it was widely transmitted at some point. Lengthy passages of the Yogatattvabindu are quoted without attribution in a text called Yogasamgraha and Sundaradeva's Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā. A critical edition will undoubtedly improve on the published edition and shed further light on the transmission of this important work.

This book contains an introduction, critical edition and annotated translation of the Yogatattvabindu. The introduction discusses provenance, authorship and the audience of the Yogatattvabindu. A comprehensive discussion of the taxonomy of the fifteen Yogas based on the critical edition of the Yogatattvabindu, together with a close examination of the above-mentioned related texts with similar taxonomies, aims to establish their position within the broader history of yoga and particularly elucidates the development of Haṭha- and Rājayoga traditions in the late medieval period. The remainder of the introduction contains an overview of the manuscript evidence and the editorial policies underlying the edition.

Dating the Yogatattvabindu

The oldest dated manuscript of the Yogatattvabindu N₁⁷ was written in Nepal saṃvat 837, which is 1716 CE. Since the text of this manuscript is missing a significant and lengthy passage (ca. 25% of the entire text) and contains various corruptions, one can assume that some time had passed from the original composition for the transmission to deteriorate to this extent. Therefore, it is likely that the work was composed at least a few decades before the creation of this Nepalese manuscript, perhaps sometime in the 17th century. The discovery that Sundaradeva's Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā quotes a lengthy passage of the Yogatattvabindu without attribution confirms this suspicion. The passages quoted from the Yogatattvabindu include the teachings on the sixteen *ādhāras*⁸ and the teachings on Lakṣyayoga and its subtypes.⁹ The dating of the Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā just recently had to be revised due to the discovery that some first-hand notes surrounding the main text of the Ujjain Yogacintāmaṇi were in all likelihood borrowed from Sundaradeva's Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā.¹⁰ BIRCH (2018) dated the Ujjain Yogacintāmaṇi to 1659 CE.¹¹ Thus, the terminus ante quem for the compilation of the Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā is 1659 CE which automatically makes it also the terminus ante quem for the Yogatattvabindu and the Yogasvarodaya, due to the fact that Sundaradeva quoted from the Yogatattvabindu and Rāmacandra quoted from and rewrote the contents of the Yogasvarodaya. Thus, we can safely assume that the Yogatattvabindu was written in the course of the first half of the 17th century or earlier. Because of that Rāmacandra's main source text Yogasvarodaya must have been written even earlier.

Implications for the dating of the Yogasvarodaya and the Siddhasiddhāntapaddhati

Furthermore, MALLINSON¹² estimated the age of the Siddhasiddhāntapaddhati to circa 1700. Due to the above-mentioned new date of the Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā and because Rāmacandra extensively quotes from Siddhasiddhāntapaddhati the new terminus terminus ante quem for the dating of the Siddhasiddhāntapaddhati likewise must be set to 1659 CE. Thus, the Siddhasiddhāntapaddhati was also likely composed during the first half of the 17th century or even earlier.

The complex medieval yoga taxonomies

The rise of diversity: The increasing complexity of Yoga teaching systems in late medieval and pre-colonial India

In diesem Kapitel soll es darum gehen, dass zwischen dem 17. und 18. Jh. in Indien parallel zu einer Popularisierung des Yoga in breiten Schichten der Gesellschaft jenseits der asketischen Traditionen eine allgemeine Entwicklung zu beobachten ist, die sich in gesteigerter Komplexität äußert. In den damals zirkulierenden Texten kommt es zu einer Steigerung der Anzahl der gelehrtten Cakras, Āsanas, Kumbhakas, aber auch die Taxonomien der einzelnen Yogakategorien die gelehrt werden nehmen an Komplexität zu.

Comparative Analysis of the complex Yoga taxonomies

The similarities between the Yoga taxonomies of Rāmacandra's Yogatattvabindu, his source text, the Yogasvarodaya as well as the taxonomies laid out by Nārāyaṇatīrtha in his Yogasiddhāntacandrikā and Sundardās' Sarvāṅgayogadīpikā which all emerged within the same time period have been initially observed and discussed briefly by BIRCH (2014)¹³ In the following chapter, the lists and their items are examined in a comparative analysis.

A complete comparative description of all Yoga categories used in the literature would go far beyond the scope of this work. However, with this presentation I hope to adequately cover our understanding of the concepts of different Yoga categories circulating in the literature of the 17th – 18th centuries that include these complex taxonomies.

The analysis will follow the structure of the individual Yogas outlined in the Yogatattvabindu. Each Yoga will be described based on the explanations in the Yogatattvabindu, and its content will be compared with the explanations of the corresponding Yoga in the texts with similar taxonomies. The comparison will broaden and clarify our understanding of the respective spectrum of meanings of the individual Yoga categories in the discursive field of the authors of the texts containing the taxonomies. This comparison results in the documentation of the discursive web of word usage of various Yoga categories between the 17th and 18th centuries CE, most probably mainly localised in central northern India.¹⁴ Individual Yoga categories that do not appear in the list of the Yogatattvabindu but are listed in the other texts with complex taxonomies will also be covered and outlined. In addition, Yoga categories that do not appear in any of the analysed lists but are nevertheless mentioned in the texts will also be covered so that this analysis attempts to approximate the overall picture of all Yoga categories used during the period under consideration as closely as possible. However, it is essential to emphasise that the comparison of Yoga categories focuses primarily on those texts that contain complex Yoga taxonomies and cannot claim to be exhaustive. Although the analysis and comparison of the Yoga categories can be extended to other Yoga texts, locations and time periods if necessary or valuable, the restriction to the complex Yoga taxonomies should be maintained to prevent this already complex endeavour going ad absurdum.¹⁵

I. Kriyāyoga

Kriyāyoga¹⁶ is the first Yoga within the list of fifteen Yogas presented by Rāmacandra and his source text Yogasvarodaya. Remarkably, Nārāyaṇatīrtha also positions Kriyāyoga at the first position within the list of fifteen Yogas in his Yogasiddhāntacandrikā. Sundardās, on the other hand, omits Kriyāyoga within his taxonomy.

Kriyāyoga in the Yogatattvabindu

Since Rāmacandra refers to all fifteen Yogas as variants of Rājayoga in his initial definition of Yoga, and no explicit hierarchy is recognisable from his formulations in the text, all variants of Rājayoga appear to have been regarded by him as equally effective. All Yogas aim towards the same goal: long-term durability of the body (bahutarakālaṃ śarīrasthitiḥ). The positioning of Kriyāyoga does not initially provide any information about the efficiency or the assignment of differently talented practitioners to a particular type of Yoga, as was the case in the older fourfold taxonomies.¹⁷ Implicit hierarchical aspects are nevertheless present - although all Yoga types are a type of Rājayoga, Rāmacandra nonetheless places Rājayoga in the final and topmost position of his taxonomy. The only apparent reason why Rāmacandra specifies Kriyāyoga as the first Yoga seems to be that his primary source text, whose content structure he largely follows,¹⁸ specifies this type of Yoga as the first.

¹⁴The complex taxonomies evolved and circulated most likely in central northern India. For a detailed discussion see p.??.

¹⁵There are hundreds, if not thousand of Sanskrit and vernacular texts from different times and different regions of India, which operate with these categories.

¹⁶See section II. on p.??-??.

¹⁷According to Amaraughaprabodha 18-24, Mantrayoga is best suited for the weak, Layayoga for the average, Haṭhayoga for the talented and Rājayoga for the exceptionally talented practitioner. In Dattātreyayogaśāstra 14, one finds the statement that the lowest practitioner should perform mantra yoga, which is then also referred to as the lowest Yoga. Śivasamhitā 12-28 expands this fourfold scheme of Yogas and practitioners with a temporal dimension. The weak practitioner needs twelve years to succeed with Mantrayoga, the average practitioner needs eight years with Laya, the able practitioner six years with Haṭha and the exceptional practitioner three years with Rājayoga

¹⁸see the chapter on "structural inconsistencies" on p.??,

The passage on Kriyāyoga in the Yogatattvabindu is relatively short. The four verses presented by Rāmacandra are quoted without attribution from the Yogasvarodaya. A prose section repeats the content of the verses. By definition, Kriyāyoga in Yogatattvabindu is “liberation through [mental] action” (kriyāmuktir ayam yogah). In contrast to Rāmacandra’s worldly definition of Rājayoga and its subcategories, here, liberation (mukti) overrides this initial goal. In addition, the practitioner achieves “success in one’s own body” (svapīṇḍe siddhidāyakaḥ). The method of Kriyāyoga involves restraining any [mental] wave before an action. This restraint consists of reducing negative [mind-]waves and cultivating positive ones. Noticeably, the number of negative waves significantly exceeds the number of positive waves.

Table 0.2: Mental waves to be cultivated and reduced in Rāmacandra’s Kriyāyoga

The one who cultivates positive [mind-]waves and reduces the negative is called a kriyāyogī. In the prose passage of the section, the term bahukriyāyogī is used. The term is unprecedented in the rest of the yoga literature and presumably intends to express many reduced and cultivated waves.

Kriyāyoga in the Yogasvarodaya

A closer examination of the Kriyāyoga section in the Yogasvarodaya reveals Rā-mancandra's reductionism since he excludes significant aspects of the original concept of the Yogasvarodaya's Kriyāyoga.

These verses²² stem from the only two currently available sources of the Yogasvarodaya, namely the quotations from the *Prāṇatoṣiṇī*²³ and the Yogakarnīkā.²⁴ The quotations of both texts essentially correspond, but the last verses of the passage differ. It cannot be ruled out that the last three verses of the Yogakarnīkā in particular come from a different source and were not present within the Yogasvarodaya. However, their content is so closely interwoven with the preceding verses that this scenario can be considered unlikely.

The main difference to the Kriyāyoga that Rāmacandra has constructed from these verses is the definition of the actions (kriyāḥ) mentioned immediately at the beginning of the verses, of which the actions (kriyās) of Kriyāyoga is then predominantly composed, namely of (1) meditation, (2) ritual worship of God, (3) offerings, (4) recitation and (5) fire sacrifice, etc. Furthermore, while Rāmacandra declares the elements mentioned in the table 0.2 as waves (kallola) of the mind which are either required to be cultivated or reduced before any action is executed, the same elements are conceptualised in the Yogasvarodaya as the intentions (saṅkalpa) preceding the previously defined actions (kriyās), which should be observed.

In the three verses concluding this section, which are only handed down in the Yogakarnīkā, the practitioner is referred to as mantrin and should perform recitation and fire offerings until entering absorption (laya).

A possible historical link, particularly in front of the Vaiṣṇava background, is the model of Kriyāyoga as found in the *Uddhavadgītā*²⁵ which is a part of the famous *Bhāgavatapurāṇa*²⁶. Here, in chapter XXII.1-55 Kṛṣṇa describes a Vaiṣṇava form of Kriyāyoga in response to a request by his disciple Uddhava. The practice entails a very complex and devotional ceremonial veneration of the deity through offerings such as flowers and food, accompanied by the ²²The numbering used here was introduced by me for practical reasons and does not correspond to the original numbering of the verses in the citations of the source texts. The Prāṇatoṣiṇī does not number the verses at all. The verses can be found in the printed edition of the Prāṇatoṣiṇī on p. 831. The verses here are in the Yogakarnīkā with the numbering 1.209-216 and can be found in the edition on p. 17.

²³A considerable part of the Yogasvarodaya is quoted with source reference (yogasvarodaye).

²⁴Normally the Yogakarnīkā quotes its sources. This passage is one of the few exceptional cases in which the verses have been taken from the Yogasvarodaya without citing the source. However, this passage ends after verse 1.216 with "iti yogasaṅketāḥ".

²⁵See i.e., CAKRAVARTIN et al. (2007).

²⁶See i.e., SHASTRI and TAGARA (1950).

recitation of prescribed mantras, meditation, and the ritual consecration of the deity, among other rites. According to the text, this type of Yoga is the most beneficial for women and the working class (22.4) and is considered a means for liberation from the fetters of Karma (22.5). The Kriyāyoga described here is presented to be in line with both the Vedas and the Tantras, considering enjoyment (bhukti) and liberation (mukti) and is promised to bestow perfection in both this life and the next, by the Lord's grace (22.49).

Furthermore, this concept of Kriyāyoga in the Yogasvarodaya might be linked to the *kriyāpāda*²⁷ of the Śaiva āgamas. The Śaiva āgamas are collections of various tantric traditions, written in Sanskrit or Tamil, in which cosmology, epistemology, philosophical teachings, various practices such as meditation or Yoga, mantra recitation, worship of the gods, etc. are described. These texts²⁸ usually consist of four sections (pādas): The jñānapāda (knowledge section), kriyāpāda (action section), caryāpāda (behaviour section) and the yogapāda (yoga section).²⁹ It can be no coincidence that jñāna°, kriyā° and caryā° were each integrated as a separate Yoga category within the taxonomy of the fifteen Yogas³⁰. The kriyāpāda is the section of a Śaiva āgama that describes rules and practices for the performance of various rituals such as the significant initiation (dīkṣa), ceremonies and worship of the gods. Additionally, prāṇāyāma techniques and meditations are often found as parts of these rituals. There are also explanations of the nature of mudrās, maṇḍalas and mantras. Furthermore, various characteristics of different types of Śaiva initiates³¹ can be found here.³² The kriyās mentioned at the beginning of the Yogasvarodaya – meditation, ritual veneration, donation, recitation, fire sacrifice, etc. have hardly deniable parallels to the kriyāpādas of the Śaiva āgamas and thus could have their reception-historical roots precisely there. The other part, however, which describes the cultivation or reduction of certain mental configurations preceding all actions (saṅkalpa) or [mental] waves (kallola), I have not yet been able to locate in the Śaiva āgamas, but they seem to be a simplyfied rendering of the Pātañjalean model of Kriyāyoga that was passend on in hitherto unknown traditions that practiced this type of Kriyāyoga.

Kriyāyoga in the Yogasiddhāntacandrikā

The Kriyāyoga in Nārāyaṇatīrtha's commentary on Pātañjalayogaśāstra entitled Yogasiddhāntacandrikā presents Kriyāyoga as the first of his fifteen Yogas, which he locates in Pātañjalayoga.³³ The term Kriyāyoga occurs in Pātañjalayogaśāstra 2.1. According to the introduction to this sūtra, in the bhāṣya-part of the Pātañjalayogaśāstra, Kriyāyoga is the means by which someone with a distracted mind can also attain Yoga (vyutthitacitto 'pi yogayuktaḥ). In Pātañjalayogaśāstra 2.1, Kriyāyoga is defined as follows:

tapahsvādhyāyeśvarapraṇidhānāni kriyāyogaḥ |

The Yoga of action consists of auterity, the self-study and devotion to the supreme lord.

Kriyāyoga, or “yoga of action”, is the action oriented method of Yoga consisting of three elements. Namely, austerity (tapas), which according to the bhāṣya should be practised both mentally and physically, the repetition of mantras or the study of sacred literature (svadhyāya) and devotion to the supreme lord (īśvarapraṇidhāna). According to Pātañjalayogaśāstra 2.2, these three elements of Kriyāyoga should lead the practitioner to attain samādhi by reducing the so-called kleśas. This explanatory model is picked up by Nārāyaṇatīrtha.³⁴ The five kleśas consist of ignorance (avidyā), self-centredness (asmitā), attachment (rāga), aversion (dveṣa) and fear of death (abhiniveśa). All three main components of Patañjali's Kriyāyoga are not mentioned in the Yogatattvabindu and Yogasvarodaya. Nevertheless, a practice similar to the reduction of the kleśas can also be found here. Although the specific fear of death (abhiniveśa) is not mentioned, the more general term for fear (bhaya) is cited.³⁵ The Kriyāyoga in Yogatattvabindu and Yogasvarodaya could, therefore, be perhaps regarded as a degenerated or simplified variant of the Pātāñjalean model, which restricts itself predominantly to the aspect of the reduction of negative waves of the mind, which is comparable to the reduction of kleśas and adds the aspect of cultivating positive mind waves to be mix. In both systems, Kriyāyoga is a means for liberation.³⁶

Kriyāyoga in the complex late-medieval Yoga taxonomies

The analysis of Kriyāyoga within the taxonomies of fifteen yogas shows two distinct models. One is Nārāyaṇatīrtha's model, which draws directly on the Kriyāyoga of Pātāñjalayogaśāstra. Additional śaiva influences characterise the other model of Kriyāyoga that seems to have been locally prominent in the 17. - 18. century C.E. The precisely defined kriyās of the Yogasvarodaya must be historically linked to the kriyāpādas of the Śaiva āgamas, whereby the core practice of reducing and cultivating specific mental configurations before any action is loosely associated with the Kriyāyoga of the Pātāñjalayogaśāstra. The observation that the kriyā-, caryā-, and jñānayogas, are an allusion to the kriyā-, caryā-, jñāna- and yogapādas of the Śaiva āgamas, shows that Nārāyaṇatīrtha, as a proponent of the Pātāñjalayoga, was most likely not the originator of the fifteenfold taxonomy, but rather that the taxonomy of the fifteen Yogas originated from local discourses around the authors and had achieved such local popularity at the time that Nārāyaṇatīrtha forced the fifteenfold taxonomy into Patañjali's Yogaśāstra in order to show that the Yogaśāstra par excellence and all those varieties of Yogas that were discussed in his sphere are in truth already present in the "classical" system of Patañjali.

³⁵The details of Nārāyaṇatīrtha's understanding of Kriyāyoga have already be discussed by PENNA (2004: 62-66) and will therefore not be covered here again.

³⁶The Kriyāyoga of the Pātāñjalayogaśāstra will not be dealt with in detail here, as this has already been done in countless academic and informal publications. Excursus: Popularisation of a new Kriyāyoga in a global context

The comparatively unique treatises on Kriyāyoga, which can only be found in the Yoga literature from the 17th-century onwards³⁷ in Yogasvarodaya and Rāmacandra's Yogatattvabindu, which deviate from the Pātañjala model, albeit not entirely, and, as shown, show clear influences of tantric origin, can be regarded as marginal phenomena for the time being. The briefly touched upon model of Uddhavaḡitā, which describes a Kriyāyoga method for mukti and bhukti through ritual worship of god, is also comparatively rare in the literature. The overwhelming majority of the Sanskrit yoga texts written in the second millennium CE, as in the case of Nārāyaṇatīrtha's Yogasiddhāntacandrikā, are based on the model of Kriyāyoga propagated in the Pātañjalayogaśāstra. Accordingly, it was above all the publication of the Yogasūtra in the West, beginning with the translation by Henry Thomas Colebrooke in 1805³⁸ which ensured that the concept of Kriyāyoga contained therein also dominated the understanding of the term in academic and informal discourse in the West for a long time.

The Western discourse only changed with the global success and popularity of Paramahansa Yogānanda (1893-1952) and the Self Realisation Fellowship he founded in 1920, which, measured against the predecessor models forms of Kriyāyoga outlined above, spread an innovative Yoga practice under the generic term Kriyāyoga. The influence of Yogānanda and others significantly changed and expanded the range of meanings of the term Kriyāyoga. In addition to various books published by Yogānanda, it was above all, the book Autobiography of a Yogi, the autobiography of Yogānanda himself, published in 1946, which paved the way for Yogānanda's success. To this day, this work is considered a classic in popular Yoga literature, has been in print for over seventy years and has been translated into more than 50 languages.³⁹ It also has a large global following to this day. Yogānanda, his books, his followers and the numerous books written by his followers have popularised this innovative and new form of Kriyāyoga beyond the Indian subcontinent. The term Kriyāyoga was allegedly already defined by Yogānanda's predecessors, namely Lahiḍi Mahāśaya (1828-1895) and Śrī Yukteśvar Giri (1855-1936), as the central generic term for the Yoga practice of this line of tradition.⁴⁰

One of Yogānanda's contemporaries was Svāmī Śivānanda Sarasvatī (1887-1963), who similarly propagated a new form of Kriyāyoga. Although his Kriyāyoga was initially based mainly on the Pātañjalayoga model, it was expanded under the same umbrella term with Haṭhayoga practices and possibly influenced by Yogānanda's model. This expansion and integration of new practices under the umbrella term Kriyāyoga was continued excessively by his students, above all Svāmī Satyānanda Sarasvatī (1923-2009), the founder of the famous Bihar School of Yoga (since 1962).

The resulting popularity of Kriyāyoga triggered a global wave and inspired others, who in turn developed similar but sometimes differently nuanced Kriyāyoga systems. One example is S.A.A. Ramaiah, who founded the Kriya Babaji Yoga Sangam in 1952. In this case, too, there is a global following.⁴¹

It was the actors mentioned above, above all Yogānanda, who ensured the global popularisation of this new form of Kriyāyoga so that their concepts are at least as well known in recent public discourse, if not better known, than the Kriyāyoga of the Pātañjalayogaśāstra.

These new forms of Kriyāyoga, which can only be traced from the beginning of the 19th century, are, as will be shown, a reservoir for innovative combinations and further developments of numerous practices already codified in Yoga texts in the medieval to pre-colonial period, which were integrated into seemingly coherent practice systems by actors such as Yogānanda, Śivānanda, Ramaiah, etc. The statements made by their traditions about the historicity of their Yoga practice utilise established narratives to lend this form of Kriyāyoga a tradition and historical legitimacy.⁴²

The Kriyāyogas of the lineages of Paramahansa Yogānanda, Svāmī Śivānanda Sarasvatī and Ramaiah

So what constitutes these new forms of Kriyāyoga? To answer this question, recent publications on this topic were consulted.⁴³ The following is a brief outline of the main features of the Yogānanda, Śivānanda and Ramaiah models of Kriyāyoga without claiming to be exhaustive. To my knowledge, a comprehensive and complete historical study of Kriyāyoga has not yet been carried out and cannot be done within this framework. This attempt is an outline and should be understood as a first approach to the topic in order to differentiate between the models circulating in public discourse on the one hand and, on the other, to formulate a hypothesis on the transition from the older models to the newer models, as these are very close in time.

Definitions

The publications consulted contain various creative etymologies and explanations of the term Kriyāyoga. HARIHARANANDA, a Kriyāyoga teacher authorised by Yogānanda ⁴⁴ himself explains:

'Kriya Yoga' are Sanskrit words, a combination of two root words. One is Kriya and the other is yoga. In the word Kriya there are two syllables: kri and ya. Kri means to pursue your work in daily life and ya means to be ever aware of the invisible God who is abiding in you and is directing and accomplishing work through you. ...The second word, 'yoga,' literally means union of the visible body with the invisible body. This union is always present in everyone. (HARIHARANANDA 1989: 83)

can already be found in a similar form in the lineages of T. Krishnamacharya. See SINGLETON and GOLDBERG, 2013: 81-121.

⁴³This list is certainly not exhaustive. Nevertheless, I have consulted a wide range of these publications available to me. 1. For the Yogānanda model: YOGĀNANDA (1949); LOWENSTEIN and LETT (2021); SATYANANDA (1981); HARIHARANANDA (1989); KRIYANANDA (1993) and STURGESS (2015). 2. For the Śivānanda model: SIVANANDA (1955) and NITYĀNANDA GIRI (2013). 3. And for the Ramaiah model: GOVINDAN (2010).

⁴⁴Cf. HARIHARANANDA 1989: 16.

Another etymology of the term kriyā can be found in LOWENSTEIN and LETT (2021: 91):

...kri meaning “work” and ya meaning “soul” or “breath” = The Work to be done with the Souls breath.

The most complex explanation of the term can be found in NITYĀNANDA GIRI (2013: 2-3), who also locates himself in the Yogānanda tradition:

The word kriyā is composed of the letters k, r, i, y, and ā. The letter -k (or ka), ka-kāra, represents the Lord, Īśvara. The Transcendental Lord, Parama Śiva, when he manifests Himself in the subtle world and makes Himself ready for creation He becomes Īśvara. The letter -r (or ra), ra-kāra, represents fire, light and manifestation. Creation is not seen by us with the ether and air elements since these are subtle elements. We are able to see manifestation from the fire element onwards. The letter -i, i-kāra, represents energy or śakti. So kri is the activating power of the Lord manifested in creation. The activating power is called prāṇa or vital force. The letter -y (or ya), ya-kāra, represents the air element and the letter -ā, ā-kāra, represents form. For the manifestations to take a form, ākāra, the Lord acts with the air element. With the ether element there is no form. The air element or gaseous state is the first created form although we only see the forms from the fire element onwards. Through the action of air the whole universe is manifested. This is the action of the Life-force, prāṇakarma, of the Lord. The word kriyā normally means action, but this is the action of god. We are made with the same principle God is. Our identification with the physical body makes us separate from God and this is the state of ignorance. We have to eradicate this ignorance by the action of God, i.e., the action of the breath, prāṇakarma. Our mind is the result of ignorance and is responsible for the wrong identification. Breath-practice, prāṇakarma, absorbs the mind into the vital force. This action of God reverses the process and leads us from body to God. This is why it is so necessary to perform that action. That is our spiritual practice. Then that action, kriyā, becomes yoga.

SATYANANDA (1981: 699), an important proponent of the Śivānanda model, defines Kriyāyoga as follows:

The Sanskrit word kriya means 'action' or 'movement'. Kriya Yoga is so called because it is a system where one intentionally rotates one's attention along fixed pathways. This movement of awareness is done, however with control. Also kriya yoga is so called because one moves the body into specific mudras, bandhas and asanas according to a fixed scheme of practice. The word kriya is often translated as meaning 'practical'. This is indeed a good definition, for kriya yoga is indeed practical. It is concerned solely with practice, without the slightest philosophical speculation. The system is designed to bring results, not merely to talk about them. Sometimes the word kriya is translated as 'preliminary'. This too is a good definition, for kriya yoga is a preliminary practice that leads first to dharana and then eventually to the transcendental state of dhyana (meditation) and yoga (union). It is a technique which has been designed to lead to that state of being which is beyond all techniques. Finally, the word kriya is used to describe each individual practice. Thus the process of kriya yoga consists of a number of kriyas each being done one after the other in a fixed sequence.

GOVINDAN (2010: 214), a student of Ramaiah offers a simple explanation of the term:

Kriyā is an activity performed with mindfulness.

As different as the concepts presented here may seem, they have in common that they are about consciously performed actions or practices that connect people with God or are intended to bring about a transcendent state, a state of yoga. In his definition, NITYĀNANDA GIRI already mentions the central action (kriyā) that should lead to a connection with God, namely breathing practice (prāṇakarma). In addition, SATYANANDA also mentions other practices such as directing attention, mūdras, bandhas and āsanas.

Further definitions can be found in the consulted texts. However, these are sufficient for the purposes here, as they illustrate the basic idea of the new models of Kriyāyoga on the one hand and show the fundamental diversity and openness of the model, which permeates all areas of these new forms of Kriyāyoga, on the other.

Histories of the new forms of Kriyāyoga from an emic perspective

NITYĀNANDA GIRI (2013: 2-7), who places himself in the lineage of Yogānanda, explains that Kriyāyoga is an eternal tradition that stands at the beginning of human history. He explains that this is why many of the scriptures, such as the Śivasūtrā, the Āgamas and the writings of the Siddhas, teach the techniques and principles of Kriyāyoga in many different ways. Moreover, remnants of this primal Kriyāyoga can be found in almost all philosophies, be it Buddhism, Jainism, Sāṅkhya, Vaiśeṣika, Nyāya, Mīmāṃsā or Vedānta.

SATYANANDA (1981: 699), the founder of the Bihar school of Yoga, explains that there is no history of Kriyāyoga and that its origins and development have been lost. Furthermore, the system of Kriyāyoga was so secret that there is not even a myth to explain its origin. Furthermore, he describes that parts of the Kriyāyoga taught by him are contained in the texts of Haṭhayoga, such as āsanas, mudrās and bandhas, but that these are not “integrated together”. Furthermore, he speculates that Kriyāyoga must have been known in China, as he sees strong parallels to practices in Tai Chi Chuan. Furthermore, he clearly distances himself from the Kriyāyoga of the Yogasūtra, which has nothing to do with the Kriyāyoga of his book A Systematic Course in the Ancient Tantric Techniques of Yoga and Kriya and serves solely as a preparation for Rājayoga. However, the only definitive historical statement he can commit himself to is the following:

Of history, all we will say is that kriya yoga was passed on by Swami Sivananda of Rishikesh.

Surprisingly, this same SIVANANDA of Rishikesh in his book Tantra Yoga, Nada Yoga and Kriya Yoga (1955) explicitly traces the Kriyāyoga he taught back to Yogasūtra 2.1. SIVANANDA (1982:168-182) uses the Kriyāyoga of the Yogasūtra as the overarching framework of his teaching, which also integrates śatkarma and breathing exercises from Haṭhayoga into it.

It is important to emphasise that SATYANANDA recognises that the traditional lineage of Yogānanda also practises the same Kriyāyoga he teaches. However, he explicitly distances himself from their narrative:

Of course, there are various other groups of people in India who have practiced and taught kriya yoga. For example, Swami Yogānanda, Yukteshwar Giri, Lahiri Mahasaya, Mahatma Gandhi and so forth practiced kriya yoga. In fact, a thriving organization still propagates it throughout the world. They also do now know the origin of kriya yoga, but they say that it was reintroduced by the great yogi Babaji as the ideal practice for sincere seekers of wisdom in the present Kali Yuga (Dark Age).

This narrative is by far the most widespread explanation of the origins of the new Kriyāyoga and is adopted not only in the tradition of Yogānanda, but also in the tradition of Ramaiah. In his book Kriya Yoga and the 18 Siddhas (2010: 31-64), GOVINDAN, a disciple of Ramaiah, has compiled this narrative in detail, which I would now like to summarise in a nutshell.

Mahāvātara Babajī, who according to GOVINDAN is considered an incarnation of the Buddha, was born in 203 CE in Parangipetta in Tamil Nadu under the name Najaraj into a Brahmin family, joined a group of wandering Saṃnyāsins at a young age and studied the holy scriptures. His path soon led him to Śrī Laṅka in Katirkāma (now Kataragama), where he became a disciple of Siddha Boganathar and was initiated by him into various kriyās such as dhyāna, āsana, mantra and bhaktiyoga. Bhoganathar later sent Babajī to another teacher, namely Siddha Agastya in Courtallam in the Pothihai hills of Tamil Nadu, located in today's Tinnevely district. He learnt the particularly important kriyā called kuṇḍalinīprāṇāyāma from him. Agastya then sent Babajī to Badrinath in the Himalayas, where he practised for many months and finally attained samādhi. After his enlightenment and attaining immortality at just 16, Babajī set himself the task of helping suffering humanity in its search for God-realisation. As an immortal, Babajī initiated great personalities such as Śaṅkarācārya (788-820) and Kabīr (1440-1518) into the techniques of Kriyāyoga over the centuries. Finally, in 1861, he initiated Lahīḍi Mahāśaya (1828-1895) into Kriyāyoga and gave him the task of passing it on to serious seekers. At this point, GOVINDAN quotes the autobiography of Yogānanda,⁴⁵ which states that Babaji explained to Lahiri Mahāśaya that Kṛṣṇa had once passed on Kriyāyoga to Arjuna and that not only Patañjali knew it, but also Jesus Christ, who in turn had passed it on to John, Paul and other disciples. Among Lahiri Mahāśaya's 100 disciples was Śrī Yukteśvar (1855-1936), to whom Babaji is also said to have appeared three times. On one of these occasions, Babaji decided that he should send his disciple Yogānanda (1893-1952) to America to spread Kriyāyoga, which he did, gaining global fame and founding the Self Realisation Fellowship in 1920, which is still very active today.

The practice of the new Kriyāyoga

In the following, the practices of the new Kriyāyoga are presented in outline based on the publications mentioned and consulted above.⁴⁶ The words of HARIHARANANDA (1989: 144) are surprisingly apt to give an essential first impression of this complex phenomenon:

Kriya Yoga is the essence and synthesis of all yoga techniques taught in the world.

SATYANANDA (1981:703) explains that each Kriyā consists of a certain number of subordinate techniques. These always consist of a combination of the following six tools: āsana, mudrā, bandha, mantra, prāṇāyāma and, as he calls it, 'psychic passage awareness'. This last point includes a group of exercises mainly involving "circulating awareness through the cakras in an ascending and descending way" or similar. A single Kriyā is an exercise unit comprising individual exercises from the six categories mentioned. However, these are not arbitrary but are integrated in a specific, scientific way in order to induce the process of concentration (dhāraṇa), meditation (dhyāna) and meditative absorption (samādhi). The main distinguishing feature from other yoga systems is the innovative and specific combination of the individual techniques into a practical and particularly effective sequence of exercises, referred to here as “Kriyā”.

⁴⁵Cf. YOGĀNANDA, 1949: 244 f.

⁴⁶A comprehensive presentation and comparative analysis of the practices in the various traditions of the new Kriyāyoga would be too far-reaching for this chapter. The most detailed written practice instructions that I have consulted can be found for the Śivānanda/Satyānanda model in SATYANANDA, (1981: 697-952) and for the Yogānanda model in NITYĀNANDA GIRI, (2013: 249-340).

In every model the individual exercises are drawn from the vast body of Yoga literature but primarily from the exercises taught in the medieval to pre-colonial texts of the Haṭha- and Rājayoga genres. This always takes place against the background of tantric and medieval concepts of the yogic body, such as cakra, nāḍī and vāyu systems. A common phenomenon in the new Kriyāyoga literature is scientific explanatory models that are used as a means of legitimisation. For example, certain nāḍīs are located in schematic sketches of the brain⁴⁷, or positive effects of Kriyāyoga practice are legitimised with evolutionary biology theories, such as the polyvagal theory⁴⁸

GOVINDAN (2010: 216–225) distinguishes a total of seven main categories of Kriyāyoga. The first category he mentions is Kriyā Hatha Yoga. According to him, this is the starting point for every student of Kriya Yoga. This includes eighteen basic relaxation postures (āsanas), muscle blocks (bandhas), certain gestures (mudrās) and the sun salutation (sūryanamaskāra) defined by Babajī.

The second main category is what GOVINDAN calls Kriyā Kundalini Pranayama. According to him, this practice is the art and science of mastering the breath and is considered to be the most essential and effective tool in Babajī’s Kriyāyoga. This is not only meant to awaken the kuṇḍaliṇī but with regular practice, the student awakens all cakras and the associated levels of consciousness, which is supposed to ultimately lead to the breathless state of samādhi and self-realisation.

The third main category is Kriyā Dhyana Yoga, which is intended to include meditation techniques that are not explained in detail but are supposed to awaken the mind’s hidden faculties.

The fourth main category is Kriyā Mantra Yoga. This involves the recitation or murmuring (japa) of mantras discovered by the Siddhas. The recitation of mantras must take place with faith, love and concentration.

GOVINDAN calls the fifth category Kriyā Bhakti Yoga, the yoga of love and devotion. In GOVINDAN’s words, this is the “turbojet” of self-realisation.

⁴⁷NITYĀNANDA GIRI, 2013: 215.

⁴⁸LOWENSTEIN and LETT, 2021: 188.

This type of Kriyāyoga includes devotional love, chanting, ritual worship and pilgrimages to holy places.

Furthermore, Kriya Karma Yoga is named as the sixth category. In this case he refers to Bhagavadgītā II.47 f. and thus defines this subtype as selfless service that is performed consciously. All actions are supposed to be performed without the expectation of receiving anything in return, free from anger, selfishness, greed and personal desires. Thus, the practitioner is meant to examine his motivation before every action and is always supposed to act without selfish motives.

The seventh and final category is Kriya Tantra Yoga. According to this, the followers of Kriyāyoga, just like the Siddhas, lead a family life. This subtype of Kriyāyoga involves retaining the energy normally wasted during sexual activity and transporting it to the higher cakras. The partner is supposed to be loved as an embodiment of the divine.

A similar system is taught in LOWENSTEIN and LETT (2021). This initially includes a total of twelve āsanas and the five Tibetans, as well as typical prāṇāyāma techniques, ujjāyi, kapalabhāti, various bandha techniques such as uḍḍīyānabandha or mahābandha, various mūdrā techniques such as mahāmu-drā, śāmbhavīmudrā, yonimudrā, or the so-called Kriya Breath. Kriya Breath is referred to as kevalakumbhaka. In addition, classical gymnastic exercises are also added⁴⁹ In addition to the āsanas of Hāṭhayoga, LOWENSTEIN and LETT also recommend Tai Chi, Qigong, physiotherapy or a personal trainer to stay fit. Now and then, a biblical quotation is used. For example, in the case of the Third Eye Gazing practice, he quotes Matthew 6:22. Furthermore, LOWENSTEIN and LETT emphasise the practice of Hong Sau as an important element of the practice. For NITYĀNANDA GIRI, Hong Sau, or in this case the indologically correct transliteration haṃsa, is also referred to by him as Haṃsa Sāadhanā,⁵⁰ “the very foundation” of Kriyāyoga.

As indicated at the beginning of this section, it is clear that the term Kriyāyoga has given rise to a kind of proliferation of different yoga techniques from earlier yoga traditions, which are integrated into innovative exercise systems and attempted to be historically legitimised in different ways. Depending on the lineage and the teacher, individual characteristics and different explanatory models exist.⁵¹

One last exemplary publication is The Kriya Yoga Upanishad and the Mystical Upanishads (1993) by KRIYANANDA. This book offers translations of ten well-known Yoga Upanishads and one Kriya Yoga Upanishad. The translator claims that the name of the author of this Sanskrit Yoga Upanishad was lost in the course of history. His book has no bibliography, nor are the sources of the translations mentioned. Further searches for a verifiable source text of the Kriya Yoga Upanishad remain unsuccessful. The Kriya Yoga Upanishad is neither to be found in the known publications and translations of the Yoga Upanishads,⁵² nor in publications of previously unpublished Upanishads.⁵³ Searching through various catalogues of Sanskrit manuscripts was also unsuccessful.⁵⁴ It is also striking that the Kriya Yoga Upanishad is not mentioned in any other publications on Kriyāyoga consulted. For the time being, therefore, the possibility must be considered that KRIYANANDA is not only the translator of the Kriya Yoga Upanishad but also the secret author. Perhaps he wrote this supposedly ancient source text in order to legitimise his own Kriyāyoga doctrine.

⁵¹In these books, one repeatedly comes across pseudo-scientific explanatory models and stumbles across parallels drawn here and there to other religions, such as Christianity and Buddhism, to emphasise the effectiveness and importance of certain practices and views. Particularly in the more recent publications, it can be seen that, depending on the author, typically individual expressions of the ideal type of postmodern spirituality and religiosity are expressed, which BOCHINGER, ENGELBRECHT, and GEBHARDT have labelled the “spiritueller Wanderer” (BOCHINGER, ENGELBRECHT, and GEBHARDT 2009: 33–49).

⁵⁴In Descriptive Catalogue of Yoga Manuscripts (Updated) (2005: 50), two manuscripts with the title Kriyāyoga (AGJ 665/1 and TSM 6716) are listed, which, unfortunately, I was unable to consult. Neither manuscript is dated. AGJ 665/1 is a Devanāgarī manuscript on paper, and TSM 6716 is a Telugu manuscript on palm leaf. The author of the latter is named Venkaṭayogin. I suspect these manuscripts are probably later works that were created in the 18th century at the earliest. For now, however, no definitive statement can be made on this. However, their consultation could shed further light on the historical development of Kriyāyoga.

Goswami KRIYANANDA learnt Kriyāyoga from his teacher Shelly Trimmer, who, according to the official website of the *Temple of Kriya Yoga*⁵⁵ founded by KRIYANANDA, was a guru, yogi, kabbalist and direct disciple of Yogānanda. KRIYANANDA studied philosophy for four years at the University of Illinois and then embarked on a business career. Whether KRIYANANDA would have acquired the qualifications to translate a Sanskrit source text remains to be seen. Possibly, he was a gifted autodidact.

In the Kriya Yoga Upanishad, the disciple Sanskriti asks the guru Dattatreya to teach him the teachings of Kriyāyoga. The latter agrees and explains Kriyāyoga in a total of ten chapters. The framework is formed by the eight-limbed Yoga system presented in 1.5, similar to the eight limbs of the Pātañjala scheme. The first chapter (1.6-25) presents the Ten Spiritual Restraints. Dattatreya explains the Ten Spiritual Observances in the second chapter (2.1-16). Chapter three, The Nine Postures (3.1-13), deals with nine āsanās with six sitting postures, one standing posture and one complex posture. The fourth chapter (4.1-63) discusses what KRIYANANDA calls Mystical Anatomy. Here, six cakras named after the planets (i.e. the mūlādhārācakra is called the “Saturn mass-energy converter cakra”), fourteen primary nāḍīs and Kriya Kundalini, which covers the ‘divine creative channel’ with its mouth, are taught. The fifth chapter (5.1-14) is entitled Inner Purification and contains simple prāṇāyāma techniques such as sūryabhedana and candrabhedana. Chapter six (6.1-39), entitled Breath Control, instructs another breathing exercise in combination with meditation on the three akṣaras that constitute the sacred syllable aum̐. During the inhalation (pūraka), the yogi is supposed to meditate on a, during the breathing posture on u and during the exhalation on ṁ. In addition, the breathing technique śitalī (6.25) and a technique called yonimudrā (6.33-34) are presented. Chapter seven (7.1-10) is about Withdrawal of the Senses. The practitioner is instructed to let the breath move through the body in a specific order. The eighth chapter (8.1-9) is entitled Concentration. Here, the yogin is meant to inhale and hold the breath at specific bodily locations (not the cakras), which are associated with the five elements and the syllables ya, ra, va, la and ha, as well as specific deities. The even shorter ninth chapter, Meditation (9.1-6), basically only states that the practice of concentration leads to meditation after a while. The tenth chapter, Samadhi (10.1-12), then describes the final state of Yoga, which is defined as the “deep conscious trance in which the yogi experiences Absolute Wisdom”.

Hypothesis on the transition from the late medieval models to the modern models of Kriyāyoga

The Yogasvarodaya and Rāmacandra's Yogatattvabindu were written before 1659 CE. Nārāyaṇatīrtha must have lived between 1600 and 1690 CE., and because of that, his Yogasiddhāntacandrikā was also written in this timeframe. Sant Sundardās, the author of the Sarvāṅgayogapradīpikā lived from 1596 to 1689. Interestingly, Nārāyaṇatīrtha and Sundardās lived in Benares.⁵⁶ Thus, we can safely assume that the complex taxonomies of twelve–fifteen Yogas were part of the local discourse of 17th-century Benares. One might speculate that Rāmacandra might also have lived in these surroundings, but this remains uncertain. Lahiḍi Mahāśaya, the person to whom the new forms of Kriyāyoga seem to go back, lived about a century later, from 1828 to 1895 CE. Interestingly, Lahiḍi Mahāśaya is also said to have spent much of his life in Benares. It is, of course, utterly unclear whether Lahiḍi Mahāśaya ever read any of the works mentioned above. However, at least we know that he not only enjoyed an education in philosophy in Benares but also learnt English and Sanskrit.⁵⁷ However, it is likely that the local discourse regarding the religious-spiritual offerings within Benares did not change abruptly. Lahiḍi Mahāśaya also lived as a family man and householder,⁵⁸ no sectarian affiliations are known so that the whole variety of religious-spiritual offerings of his time were open to him. He was able to combine them freely. As can be seen from the Yoga texts examined in this book, there was no lack of different Yoga categories in Benares between the 17th and 19th centuries CE. Although these were still labelled differently, they were without a doubt freely combined in practice. Moreover, given the plethora of Yoga practices from different Yoga traditions and Yoga texts presented in the previous chapter and evident in the publications of the new Kriyāyoga consulted, it is not only credible but also plausible that this phenomenon already began with Lahiḍi Mahāśaya, as Yogānanda claims in his autobiography. However, why Lahiḍi Mahāśaya chose the category of Kriyāyoga as the generic term for his Yoga system cannot be answered conclusively. However, I would like to offer an educated guess.

I hypothesize that the term Kriyāyoga, as the generic term for his system of Yoga, was a strategic decision of Lahiḍi Mahāśaya. It is unlikely, and there is no clear evidence that Lahiḍi Mahāśaya knew the Yogasvarodaya, Yogatattvabindu and Yogasiddhāntacandrikā. It is impossible to determine if there ever was any influence of these texts on Lahiḍi Mahāśaya and his new Kriyāyoga system. But if there was, only the fact that all three texts that mention Kriyāyoga as the very first item in their taxonomies could have influenced his decision to unite all possible Yogas and their techniques under the term Kriyāyoga. Another factor could have been that he was consciously or unconsciously driven by the emerging Yogasūtra hype in the West, which triggered a wave of enthusiasm in India. One wonders why he did not choose the term Rājayoga to integrate many systems as others have done before him. Maybe because the term Rājayoga was already used as a generic term for Pātañjalayoga by then.⁵⁹ Perhaps, the term Kriyāyoga had the advantage that it not only formed a link to the popular and hyped Yogasūtra, but also provided a basic framework that was open to interpretation due to the three constitutional practices tapas, svādhyāya and īśvarapraṇidhāna. Thus, the term opened up the possibility to integrate the variety of post-Pātañjalean physical and non-physical Yoga practices from the Tantras and texts of Haṭha- and Rājayoga through a literal interpretation of the compound prefix kriyā° in the sense of “action”. Whether his thoughts went in a similar direction must remain open. However, we must assume that the discursive environment of Benares at his time certainly played its part in encouraging Lahiḍi Mahāśaya to integrate the various Yogas circulating in the local discourse of his time under this specific term.

2. Jñānayoga

Jñānāyoga⁶⁰ is the second yoga in Rāmacandra's list of the fifteen yogas as well as in his source text, the Yogasvarodaya. In Nārāyaṇatīrtha's list of the fifteen yogas in the Yogasiddhāntacandrikā, Jñānayoga takes sixth place. Sundardās positions Jñānayoga in tenth place in his list of twelve yogas in his Sarvāṅgayogapradīpikā. Here, it is subsumed under the category Sāṅkhyayoga, the fourth tetrad of his list.

Jñānayoga in the Yogatattvabindu

Jñānayoga occupies the second place in Rāmacandra's taxonomy of the fifteen Yogas but is not described as the second yoga in his text.⁶¹ The description is given from section XXI-XXII. The overarching goal of Rāmacandra's Jñānayoga is the long-term durability of the body (bahutarakālaṃ śarīrasthitiḥ) already mentioned in the introduction (section I), which is expressed here once again with other words: 'From the execution of this [Jñānayoga], time does not bring about the destruction of the body' (tasya kāraṇāt kālaḥ śarīranāśaṃ na karoti). Simultaneously, Rāmacandra's Jñānayoga leads to the attainment of the 'reality of Śambhu' (śāmbhavisattā).⁶² This Jñānayoga can be practised in two ways. The first method (XXI.1) arises through the application of 'non-dualistic thinking' (avikalpatayā yuktyā), and the second method (XXI.2) arises through the realisation that the entire world consists of all knowledge (...sarvajñānamayaṃ jagat | ya evaṃ vettibodhena...). However, the text primarily deals with the first method. This method consists of viewing the world as a unity that is enlightened by the highest self (viśvātman). If one perceives this unity, one finds oneself in the 'reality of Śambhu'. However, this supreme reality cannot be recognised without further ado since it does not show itself as the desired unity but as a tenfold multiplicity (XXI.4ab). He compares this relationship to a seed from which a whole tree with its parts grows (XXI.4-XXI.5). The seed stands for the ⁶⁰see section XXI and XXII on p.??-??

⁶¹The description of Jñānayoga is preceded by Siddhakuṇḍaliniyoga and Mantrayoga (III-XII), Lakṣyayoga (XIII-XV), Rājayoga (XVI-XVII), Caryāyoga (XVIII) and Haṭhayoga (XIX-XX). See chapter ????? on structural problems of Yogatattvabindu on p.??.

⁶²This refers to the highest reality and the state of Rājayoga. See p.?? in the edition for a discussion of the term.

invisible unity of world and self. The tree, with its various parts, stands for the multiplicity of the visible world. The fundamental unity of the world is like the seed from which a whole tree has grown. It is no longer visible and is not perceived. However, what is perceived is a world consisting of a multiplicity. In the case of the seed, a tree with its branches, leaves, etc. In the case of the world ten basic principles (tattvas): Five [gross] elements (pañcatattva), thinking mind (manas), intellect (buddhi), illusion (māya), individuation (ahaṃkāra), and modifications (vikriyā).⁶³ Jñānayoga is supposed to produce the realisation of oneness (XXI.7). In order to realise this, the practitioner is supposed to apply the view of unity (aikyena darśanam) to recognise the identity between the visible world of multiplicity⁶⁴, and the invisible self (viśvātma). Through Jñānayoga, the practitioner then realises that the self is one with the world⁶⁵ and the changing forms of the worlds material appearance are empty.⁶⁶

Jñānayoga in the Yogasvarodaya

If we assume a correct transmission of the Yogasvarodaya in the Prāṇatoṣiṇī, then the text, in fact, describes two very different types of Jñānayoga.

The Jñānayoga of the first passage⁶⁷ contains a description of the major components of the yogic body which the Yogi is supposed to know. Gaining knowledge about the body is the aim of this Jñānayoga.⁶⁸ In particular, the three primary channels (nāḍīs)⁶⁹, as well as a system with a total of nine cakras are supposed to be known. They are described in detail. The introduction to this first form of Jñānayoga mentions other things the Yogi should know, such as the three targets [for fixing the mind] (lakṣyas),⁷⁰ sixteen containers [for holding mind and often breath in the context of this type of yogic practice] (ādhāras) and the five [meditative] spaces (vyomans) through which the yogin progresses on the path to the highest state of Yoga. However, these do not specifically belong to yogic physiology like the channels and nāḍīs. Thus, they are not treated in the first Jñānayoga section but dealt with separately during the text.

This first form of Jñānayoga in the Yogasvarodaya, like much of its content and even its sequence, is adopted by Rāmacandra in his Yogatattvabindu. Surprisingly, he adopts the first form of Jñānayoga under a different name. Instead of Jñānayoga, Rāmacandra calls it Siddhakuṇḍaliniyoga and Mantrayoga. It is unclear why Rāmacandra made this change. Perhaps Rāmacandra did not want to teach two different forms of Jñānayoga, or he was convinced that Siddhakuṇḍaliniyoga and Mantrayoga were the more appropriate terms for this type of Yoga. Another possibility would be that the quotations of the Yogasvarodaya in the Prāṇatoṣiṇī are corrupted. However, this is the less likely scenario. A detailed discussion of Siddhakuṇḍaliniyoga and Mantrayoga in Rāmacandra's Yogatattvabindu can be found on p.??.

The Jñānayoga of the second passage⁷¹ is almost identical with Rāmacandra's Jñānayoga. Rāmacandra adopts most of the verses verbatim from the Yogasvarodaya. There are minor details that Rāmacandra modifies, but they do not significantly change the concept and aim of Jñānayoga. A slight simplification of the presentation can be observed.

Jñānayoga in the Yogasiddhāntacandrikā

Nārāyaṇatīrtha situates his Jñānayoga⁷² in the context of Pātañjalayogaśāstra's sūtra 1.28, which says:

taj japas tadarthabhāvanam || 28 ||

It's low-voice muttering; contemplation of its meaning.

⁷⁰In the sections on Lakṣyayoga in the Yogasvarodaya and Yogatattvabindu five targets (lakṣyas) are described in total. This is one of many inconsistencies in the Yogasvarodaya and the Yogatattvabindu.

⁷¹*Prāṇatoṣiṇī*, Ed. p. 835-837.

⁷²For an earlier brief discussion of Jñānayoga in Nārāyaṇatīrtha's yogacandrika see PENNA, 2004: 76.

This is the last sūtra of an extensive section (1.23 - 1.28) in the *Pātañjalayogaśāstra*⁷³, which is entirely dedicated to one of the means of attaining samādhi, namely īśvarapraṇidhāna, devotion to Īśvara, the Supreme Lord.

Īśvara is most aptly represented by the sacred syllable aum̐. The above sūtra instructs the quiet murmuring of this syllable while contemplating its meaning (tadarthabhāvanam) as a practical method of īśvarapraṇidhāna to attain the highest state of Yoga, which is called asaṃprajñātasamādhi.

In this context, Nārāyaṇatīrtha explains that in this sūtra, the term 'low-voice muttering' (japa) refers to the practice of Mantrayoga. The term 'contemplating its meaning' (arthabhavana) refers to Jñānayoga as a form of practice that cultivates discriminating knowledge (see previous paragraph). Furthermore, in this context, Nārāyaṇatīrtha refers to Advaitayoga, also associated with this sūtra, which is a form of Yoga characterised by the view of the non-differentiation of the individual self and the supreme self.⁷⁴

Nārāyaṇatīrtha, thus, offers two alternatives about the specific performance of the contemplation. Either, while quietly murmuring the praṇava syllable, which symbolises Īśvara and his qualities, attention is supposed to be focused on the distinction between consciousness (puruṣa) and primordial nature (prakṛti) including its effects (tatkārya).⁷⁵ This is Nārāyaṇatīrtha's Jñānayoga. Alternatively, one is supposed to reflect on the non-difference

⁷³An entire monograph entitled God, Reason, and Yoga: A Critical Edition and Translation of the Commentary Ascribed to Śaṅkara on Pātañjalayogaśāstra 1.23—28 is dedicated to this section by HARI-MOTO (2014). It provides an edition, translation and detailed discussion of this critical passage in the Pātañjalayogaśāstravivaraṇa.

⁷⁴Cf. Yogasiddhāntacandrikā Ed. p. 46: 'Furthermore, by the term japa, the practice of Mantrayoga is indicated; by 'arthabhavana,' the knowledge of discrimination, the form of practice [called] Jñānayoga, and Advaitayoga is the form of cultivating non-differentiation. (kiñca japa ity anena mantrayogaḥ arthabhāvanam ity anena vivekajñānā 'bhyāsarūpo jñānayogaḥ abhedabhāvarūpo 'dvaitayogaś ca saṃgrhītaḥ)).

⁷⁵Cf. Yogasiddhāntacandrikā Ed. p. 45: 'The low-voice muttering of praṇava [and] pronunciation according to the rules [along with] the contemplation of the meaning of that praṇava, [being associated with] the Supreme Self endowed with inconceivable power and supremacy, is the fixation of the attention with discernment from the individual self and nature with its effects.' (tasya praṇavasya japaḥ vidhivad uccāraṇam, tadarthasya praṇavārthasya acintyaiśvaryaśaktiyuktasya paramātmāno bhāvanam prakṛtitatkāryapurusebhyo vivekenānusaṃdhānam).

between the highest self (paramātmān) and the individual self (jīva).⁷⁶ This is Nārāyaṇatīrtha's Advaitayoga.

Jñānayoga in the Sarvāṅgayogapradīpikā

The Jñānayoga of Sundardās (SYP 4.13–24) is similar to the Jñānayoga of Rāmacandra and the Yogasvarodaya. Although Sundardās does not mention a tattva system, the reality of Śambhu or the physical effects of this yoga is also about recognising that the universe and the world form a unity.⁷⁷ According to Sundardās, the self is the cause, and the whole universe is the effect.⁷⁸ To illustrate the relationship of cause and effect between self and universe, Sundardās presents the same metaphor of the seed and the tree as Rāmacandra in XXI.4–5.⁷⁹ The rest of the section consists of different comparisons, which are supposed to illustrate the non-difference between the self and the whole or the universe.⁸⁰

3. Caryāyoga

Caryāyoga occupies third place in Rāmcandra's list, is absent in the Yogasvarodaya, in second place in Nārāyaṇatīrtha, and also absent in Sundardās. However, Sundardās describes a Yoga with the almost homophonic name Carcāyoga, which will be compared in the following to determine whether there is a connection between the two concepts.

⁷⁶Cf. ibid.: 'Alternatively, its meaning is the repeated imprinting in the mind of the non-distinction between the individual self and the total supreme self.' (athavā tadarthasya paramātmānaḥ pūrṇasya bhāvanam jīvābhedena punaḥ punaś cetasi niveśanam /).

⁷⁷See BURGER (2014: 702) for an earlier brief discussion of Sundardās's Jñānayoga in French.

⁷⁸*Sarvāṅgayogapradīpikā* 4.13: 'Now understand Jñānayoga. Recognize the cause and effect. The cause is the indivisible soul. The effect is the whole universe.' (jñāna yoga aba esaṁ jānaim | kāraṇa aru kāraya pahicānaim | kāraṇa ātama āhi akhāṇḍā | kāraya bhayau sakala brahmaṇḍā || 13 ||)

⁷⁹*Sarvāṅgayogapradīpikā* 4.14: 'Just as the tree [grows] out of the seed, bringing forth countless branches, leaves, fruits and flowers, in the same way the self is the root of the universe.' (jyaum aṁkuru teṁ taru vistārā | bahuta bhāṁti kari nikasi ḍārā | śāṣā patra aura pharaphulā | jyaum ātamā viśva kau mūlā || 14 ||)

⁸⁰For example Sarvāṅgayogapradīpikā 4.20: 'Just like various ornaments made of gold, are worn with different names and forms. However, in essence, all become one in the melting pot. In the same way, the self is not separate from the universe.' (jyaum kuñcana ke bhūṣana nānā | bhinna bhinna kari nāmva baṣaṇā | gāre sarba eka hi huvā | yaim ātamā biśva nahim juvā || 20 ||)

Caryāyoga in the Yogatattvabindu

Rāmacandra keeps the section on Caryāyoga (section XVIII) extremely short, with only eight prose sentences. After characterising the self as 'formless, permanent, immovable and indivisible', Rāmacandra lets the reader know that by stabilising the mind in such a self, the self does not come into contact with sin and merit. When the mind is absorbed into the formless [self], this is Caryāyoga. This is all which Rāmacandra says on this subject. The brevity of the passage and the fact that Rāmacandra's source text, the Yogasvarodaya, does not contain this type of Yoga, but Rāmacandra clearly constructs it on the basis of a description of Rājayoga of the Yogasvarodaya,⁸¹ suggests that Rāmacandra merely wanted to do justice to his list mentioned at the beginning.⁸² It remains unclear why this Yoga with this particular description bears the name Caryāyoga. The apparent association of the first four Yogas in Rāmacandra's and Yogasvarodaya's list with the four pādas of the Śaiva Āgamas (kriyā-, jñāna-, caryā- and yogapāda) does not offer a convincing solution in this case, as caryā^o in this context has nothing to do with the original ritual discipline of the śaivite practices, as would be the case in the caryāpāda of a Śaiva Āgamas. It is, therefore, unlikely that any Yoga practitioners practised a Caryāyoga that corresponds to the brief description of Rāmacandra.

Caryāyoga in the Yogasvarodaya

The term Caryāyoga does not exist in the Yogasvarodaya sources available to me, namely Prāṇatoṣinī and Yogakarnikā. The term Caryāyoga does not appear in the taxonomy of Yoga categories in the Yogasvarodaya.⁸³ Although the verses concerning the yogic taxonomy postulate a total of fifteen Yogas, only eight are mentioned. Whether Caryāyoga remained unmentioned is unclear, but its presence in the taxonomies of the *Yogatattvabindu*⁸⁴ and the Yogasiddhān-

⁸¹Cf. Yogatattvabindu XVIII, p. ??

⁸²One could argue that Rāmacandra may not have done so, since not all fifteen Yogas announced at the beginning are described in the course of his text anyway. I suspect that this may nevertheless have been his original intention but that Rāmacandra discarded this intention while writing his text, perhaps due to inconsistencies in his source text ⁸³*Prāṇatoṣinī* ed. p. 831.

⁸⁴*Yogatattvabindu* I. ll. 1-4.

*tacandrikā*⁸⁵ certainly makes its affiliation seem possible and quite probable. What the Yogasvarodaya originally looked like can only be surmised. Although it almost seems as if the entire Yogasvarodaya has been handed down in the Prāṇatoṣiṇī, the Yogakarnīkā contains several verses of the Yogasvarodaya which have not been handed down in the Prāṇatoṣiṇī.⁸⁶ For this reason, the text may have been more extensive and could have transmitted a Caryāyoga. The Yogasvarodaya was likely the first text to mention the taxonomy of the fifteen yogas.⁸⁷ If the association with the four pādas of the Śaiva Āgamas had been made by the author of the Yogasvarodaya, then a yoga related to the ritual discipline of śaivite practices would be the most obvious suggestion of what such a Caryāyoga might have looked like. Indeed, in Yogakarnīkā 1.23–61 under the heading dinacaryā ('daily [ritual] behaviour'), there are detailed descriptions of daily yogic ritual behaviour. It is surprising that for a large part of the first chapter (1.1–168), the source texts of the verses are not given, especially since the rest of the first chapter and all other chapters of the text are largely compilations of quotations consisting of verses from other texts on typical yogic topics. Throughout the Yogakarnīkā, larger sections of the Yogasvarodaya and other texts are repeatedly quoted with reference. Is it possible that Nāth Aghorānanda, the author of the Yogakarnīkā, also drew on verses from the Yogasvarodaya here? At least in the second part of the first chapter (1.169–280), 37 verses (1.244–280) have been taken from the Yogasvarodaya with reference and demonstrably at least four verses without reference (1.210–213).⁸⁸ This question cannot be answered without manuscripts of the Yogasvarodaya. However, there may be further verses of the Yogasvarodaya within the first 168 verses of the Yogakarnīkā. Nonetheless, for the time being, one of the most plausible scenarios is that the original Caryāyoga in the taxonomy of the fifteen Yogas was similar to the contents of the dinacaryā section of the Yogakarnīkā. This section deals with daily ritual ablutions with mantra recitation, visualisation and meditation (1.23–36) and other ritual acts such as ritual dressing, the ap-

Caryāyoga in the Yogasiddhāntacandrikā

In his *Yogasiddhāntacandrikā*⁸⁹ Nārāyaṇatīrtha presents Caryāyoga⁹⁰ in the context of Yogasūtra 1.33:

Due to impurities of the mind like jealousy, etc., preventing the attainment of Yoga, the method of removing them is Caryāyoga - Purity of the mind arises through the cultivation of friendliness, compassion, joy and equanimity in circumstances of happiness, suffering, virtue and vice.⁹¹

Caryāyoga is to cultivate kindness towards those in fortunate circumstances to prevent jealousy. Towards those who are in sorrowful circumstances, compassion is supposed to be cultivated to prevent ill-will. Towards those who act virtuously, one is supposed to cultivate joy to prevent aversion; and towards those who act unvirtuously, one is supposed to cultivate equanimity to prevent anger.⁹²

With this practice of Caryāyoga, which gradually purifies the mind, the sattvic nature of the mind is brought forth. This leads to a clear and serene mind.⁹³

Since the word caryā° in this context refers to purposeful behaviour designed to give rise to the sattvic nature, the Caryāyoga of the Yogasiddhāntacandrikā can be meaningfully translated as 'Yoga of behaviour'.

Carcāyoga in the Sarvāṅgayogapradīpikā

Within Sarvāṅgayogapradīpikā (2.40-51, Ed. pp. 96-98), Sundardās describes Cārcāyoga as one of the three subtypes of Bhaktiyoga which is bhakti towards unmanifest consciousness (avyakta puruṣa) in delightful devotion.⁹⁴ He extensively describes the unmanifest consciousness (avyakta puruṣa) as being formless and eternal and so on (40), as beginningless and endless, and so on (41). Next, Sundardās describes the various layers of creation emanating from om (42-45). He says the unmanifest consciousness illuminates every corner of existence (46), being the inner knower of all (47). Then, Sundardās expresses the importance of deep awe towards the infinite, divine, all-knowing and incomprehensible (48-49) unmanifest consciousness.

The entire passage on Carcāyoga is characterised by a discussion and description of the unmanifest consciousness (avyakta puruṣa). This aspect is the core of this type of Yoga. Unlimited unmanifested consciousness can be put into limiting words only, and yet the practitioner is confronted with the question of how it is supposed to be defined and determined.⁹⁵ And this is precisely the practice of Carcāyoga. The term carcā° here refers to 'discussing' or 'putting into words' and emphasising individual details of unmanifest consciousness to generate deep reverence for the cultivation of Bhaktiyoga, the Yoga of devotional worship of avyakta puruṣa. The following verse illustrates this:

How to discuss, where to find you, O Lord? You are the inner knower of everything. There is no end to describing creation. Your limit cannot be reached by any means.⁹⁶

⁹⁴ See BURGER (2014: 694-695) for an earlier brief discussion of Sundardās's Carcāyoga in French

⁹⁵ Cf. Sarvāṅgayogapradīpikā 2.41ab (avyakta puruṣa agama apārā kaisaiṃ kai kariye nirdhārā |

Thus, it is clear that no direct conceptual connection exists between the Caryāyogas described above and Carcāyoga. A meaningful explanation for the conspicuous homophony of both terms cannot be offered for the time being.

4. Haṭhayoga

Haṭhayoga appears without exception in all complex late medieval yoga taxonomies. In the taxonomies with fifteen Yogas of the Yogatattvabindu, the Yogasvarodaya and the Yogasiddhāntacandrikā, it occupies the fourth position. In the twelvefold taxonomy of Sundardā's Sarvāṅgayogapradīpikā, it is in fifth position and, in addition to its own category, is also the superordinate category for the three subsequent Yogas described by Sundardās, namely Rāja-, Lakṣa- and Aṣṭāṅgayoga.

Haṭhayoga in the Yogatattvabindu and Yogasvarodaya

In section XIX-XX of the Yogatattvabindu, two categories of Haṭhayoga are distinguished. Both are based on the explanations of the Yogasvarodaya, differ only slightly in formulation, and can, therefore, be considered together.⁹⁷ Both passages in these two texts are characterized by their brevity.

The first type of Haṭhayoga described teaches the control of the breath through exhalation (recaka), inhalation (pūraka) and breath retention (kumbhaka) etc. With the term “etc.” (°ādi°), the text probably refers to other known practices of Haṭhayoga. In addition to other breathing exercises, this could also refer to the other known basic building blocks of Haṭhayoga, which have been associated with Haṭhayoga since Svātmarāma's Haṭhapradīpikā: āsana, mudrā and nādānusandhāna. At least āsana is explicitly mentioned in the Yogasvarodaya, but not in the Yogatattvabindu (kṛtvāsanam pavanāśam śarīre rogahāarakam). Both texts then mention the six actions that purify the body (ṣaṭkarma). Then Rāmacandra states that when the full breath dwells within the solar channel (sūryanāḍi), the mind becomes immobile. Through the immobility of the mind, bliss arises, and the mind is absorbed into emptiness (śūnya). The resulting state leads to the delay of the time of death (kālaḥ samīpe nāgachati). The naming of the sun channel is striking in this context. The Yogasvarodaya is no concrete help here, as it merely speaks of an unspecified nāḍī,⁹⁸ in which, triggered by the preceding practice, the fullness of breath is established (etan nāḍyān tu deveśi vāyupūrṇaṁ pratiṣṭhitam | tato mano nīcalaṁ syāt tata ānanda eva hi |). The majority of texts of the Haṭhayoga genre would certainly specify suṣūmnā, the central channel, and not the right channel associated with the sun called piṅgalā, in the context of the “immobility of the mind”, a central characteristic of the samādhi state, because the occurrence of the yoga state, or samādhi, is often associated with the entry of the breath into the central channel.⁹⁹ Either the term sūryanāḍī is to be understood here as an unfortunate synonym,¹⁰⁰ or the text is corrupt.¹⁰¹ A final possibility would be to assume a practice associated with the piṅgalā channel. The term sūryanāḍī is found in the Siddhasiddhāntapaddhati, a text that also served as a model for Rāmacandra.¹⁰²

The second type of Haṭhayoga in Yogatattvabindu instructs the yogin to contemplate a non-specific form (kiṁcidrūpā) in the colours white, yellow, blue and red equal to the radiance of ten million suns in one's own body from head to toe (cintyate). This is supposed to burn away all diseases of the body and prolong life. In the Yogasvarodaya, there is no mention of an unspecific form. However, these colours and the sun's radiance are meant to be contemplated in the area of the tip of the nose (ākāśe nāsikāgre tu sūryakoṭisamaṁ smaret | śvetam raktam tathā pītam kṛṣṇam ity ādirūpataḥ). |). Rāmacandra and the Yogasvarodaya

⁹⁸ Since the YSv mentions no specific nāḍī, it is likely that it is the nāḍī par excellence, the suṣūmnā

⁹⁹ This is already evident, for example, in the oldest written testimony of the Haṭhyoga genre, the Amṛtasiddhi 26.1-2 (yo 'sau siddhimayo vāyur madhyamāpadanīcalaḥ | tadānandamayaṁ cittam ekarūpaṁ nabhaḥsamam || 26.1 || yadānandamayaṁ cittam bāhyakleśāvivarjitam | bhavaduḥkhāni saṁhr̥tya samādhir jāyate tadā || 26.2 ||) is the case. MALLINSON and SZÁNTÓ translate: (1) 'When Breath is perfected and fixed in the place of the Goddess of the Centre, then consciousness has the nature of bliss, uniform like the sky.' (2) 'When consciousness has the nature of bliss, free from external afflictions, then, having the sorrows of existence, Samādhi arises'. This idea, which can be found in this genre from the 11th century at the latest, subsequently permeates the entire genre

¹⁰⁰ In the sense of being ambiguous and overlapping with the piṅgalā channel.

¹⁰² Cf. Siddhasiddhāntapaddhati 2.5: pañcamam kaṇṭhacakraṁ caturāṅgulaṁ tatra vāme iḍā candranāḍī dakṣiṇe piṅgalā sūryanāḍī tanmadhye suṣūmnāṁ dhyāyet saivānāhatakalā anāhataśiddhir bhavati | describe the second type of Haṭhayoga so briefly and vaguely that the reader is denied a clearer picture. It should be noted at this point that the formulation is very reminiscent of Bāhyalakṣya's explanations in section XXIII¹⁰³. Interestingly, in Sundardā's Sarvāṅgayogapradīpikā, Lakṣ(y)ayoga is a subcategory, i.e. a partial practice, of Haṭhayoga. Is this the source for this differentiation? Further parallels to practices of other texts of Haṭhayoga involving coloured or non-coloured light exist but are still too distant to convincingly assign Rāmacandra's second type,¹⁰⁴ and thus remain enigmatic for the time being.

Haṭhayoga in the Yogasiddhāntacandrikā

In the Yogasiddhāntacandrikā, the discussion and description of Nārāyaṇatīrtha's Haṭhayoga is spread over several sūtras of the first two chapters, the samādhipāda (1.34) and the sādhana-pāda (2.46-52). The commentary by Nārāyaṇatīrtha is particularly extensive and detailed here.¹⁰⁵

Nārāyaṇatīrtha first locates Haṭhayoga in the context of sūtra 1.34. This sūtra is one of several options (1.32-40) that can be applied to overcome the distractions described in sūtras 1.30-31, which distract from the state of yoga (asamprajñātasamādhi or kaivalya) sought in Pātanjalayoga:

Or, through exhaling and restraining of the breath.

This method thus serves to establish a clear mind. This is referred to by Nārāyaṇatīrtha as Haṭhayoga. In his commentary, Nārāyaṇatīrtha explains that the term pracchardana means the slow outward emptying of the breath of the abdomen through one of the two nostrils in measured quantities.¹⁰⁶ The term vidhāraṇa is the external continuous breath-holding of exhaled air.¹⁰⁷ Furthermore, Nārāyaṇatīrtha specifies this method of breath retention as ¹⁰³Cf. p. ??

¹⁰⁶*Yogasiddhāntacandrikā* 1.34 (Ed. p. 53): kauṣṭhyasya vāyoḥ pracchardanam, ekataranāsāpuṭeṇa mātṛāpramāṇeṇa śanaiḥ śanair bāhar niḥsāraṇam |

¹⁰⁷*Ibid.* 1.34 (Ed. p. 53): vidhāraṇaṃ recitasya vāyor bahir eva sthāpanaṃ kumbhakaṃ |

recitakumbhaka. It is the first of a total of seven breathing postures (saptakumbhaka) and is considered particularly praiseworthy, as hardly any rules need to be observed for this type. However, this group of seven kumbhakas - recita, pūrīta, śānta, pratyāhāra, uttara, ādhāra and sama - is only mentioned in the second chapter in the context of the fourth limb of the aṣṭāṅgayoga called prāṇāyāma (2. 49-53) together with another seven of the eight kumbhakas of the Haṭhapradīpikā.¹⁰⁸

According to Nārāyaṇatīrthas, the mastery of the breath and the mastery of the mind are intrinsically linked. At the same time, prāṇāyāma has the power to eradicate all sins, which enables the mind to concentrate and stabilize on a meditative focal point or goal (lakṣya).¹⁰⁹

Finally, Nārāyaṇatīrtha authenticates the linking of prāṇāyāma and Haṭhayoga (prāṇāyāmasya haṭhayogatvam uktaṃ smṛtau) with the famous verse of Yogabīja (148cd-149ab), in which the syllable “ha” is linked to the sun and the syllable “ṭha” to the moon. Thus, haṭha is understood as the union of sun and moon.¹¹⁰

The next section of the Yogasiddhāntacandrikā, which discusses aspects of Haṭhayoga, is only found in the context of the third limb of the aṣṭāṅgayoga, which is described beginning with sūtra 2.46.

itaḥ paraṃ sakalarogādīnivr̥ttidvārā haṭhayogasyopāyam āsanam āhasthīrasukham āsanam || 46 ||

From here on, postures, being the means of Haṭhayoga, are said to be the gateways to preventing all diseases etc.

A comfortable and steady position.

Nārāyaṇatīrtha then presents various āsanas. Of a total of 84 āsanas, 38 are described in detail. BIRCH observed as early as 2018,¹¹¹ that Nārāyaṇatīrtha's

¹⁰⁸ Ibid. 1.34 (Ed. p. 53): *tathā cātra pūrakavarjanād recitapūrītasāntapratyāhārottaraādhārasamabhe-

¹¹⁰ Ibid. 1.34 (ed. p. 53): *hakāreṇa tu sūryo 'sau thakāreṇendur ucyate | sūryacandramasor aikyaṃ haṭha
ity abhidhiyate ||* The context suggests here, that Nārāyaṇatīrtha associates the sun and moon with the piṅgalānāḍī (representing the sun) and iḍānāḍī (representing the moon). Their union would then be the inhalation through these channels with subsequent breath holding.

¹¹¹ Cf. BIRCH 2018, p. 105, fn. 9.

descriptions of the āsana were borrowed from earlier yoga texts, such as the Haṭhapradīpikā (which Nārāyaṇatīrtha refers to as Yogapradīpa), the Vasiṣṭhasaṃhitā and the Dharmapatrikā.^{112 113}

In 2.47-48, Nārāyaṇatīrtha specifies further details on the execution of the Yoga postures, which are not discussed further here.¹¹⁴ Far more important for the determination of Nārāyaṇatīrtha's Haṭhayoga is 2.49-51. In addition to a detailed discussion of the three basic elements of prāṇāyāma - exhalation (recaka), inhalation (pūraka) and breath holding (kumbhaka) and their specifics in the commentary to 2. 49-50, Nārāyaṇatīrtha then discusses kevalakumbhaka, the fourth aspect of prāṇāyāma, the overarching goal and ultimate result of breath retention.^{115 116}

This kevalakumbhaka is achieved in a lengthy process with gradually more subtle advances through the practice of ordinary kumbhaka, which is specified as sahitakumbhaka.¹¹⁷ Only when the bodily channels have been purified through practice, and the movements of exhalation and inhalation have entirely ceased does kevalakumbhaka arise. An appropriate translation is "isolated breath retention", as it is isolated from the inhalation and exhalation.¹¹⁸

¹¹²A list of the 38 of 84 āsanas discussed in detail below can be found in Yogasiddhāntacandrikā 2.46 (Ed. p. 107-108): tac ca padma-siddha-bhadra-vīra-svastika-siṃha-daṇḍa-sopāśraya-paryāṅka-mayūra-kukkuṭa-uttānakukkuṭa-pāścimatāna-matsyendrapīṭha-cakra-gomukha-karma-dhanu-mrgasvastika-arddhacandra-aṅjalika-pīṭha-vajra-mukta-candra-arddhaprasārītaśava-kapāla-guruḍa-arddhāsana-kamala-krauñcaṇiṣadana-hastiniṣadana-uṣṭraniṣadanakapiniṣadana-yogāsana-yonyāsana-samasthāna-ādibhedena caturāṣitiprakāram | eteṣāṃ lakṣaṇāni yogapradīpādāv uktāni | The detailed descriptions of the 38 āsanas can be found immediately following on p. 108-114.

¹¹³PENNA (2004: 207-209) has briefly discussed the āsanas of the Yogasiddhāntacandrikā.

¹¹⁴A more detailed sketch of the prāṇāyāma-system of Nārāyaṇatīrtha's Yogasiddhāntacandrikā can be found in PENNA (2004: 209-18).

¹¹⁵Cf. Yogasiddhāntacandrikā 1.34 (Ed. p. 116): 'Yājñavalkya declares its characteristic as follows - Having abandoned inhalation and exhalation, that comfortable restraint of breath is breath-control. This indeed is indeed taught as "isolated retention"'. (asya ca lakṣaṇam yājñavalkya āha-recakam pūrakam tyaktvā yat sukham vāyudhāraṇam | prāṇāyāmo 'yam ity uktāḥ sa vai kevalakumbhakaḥ ||

¹¹⁶See Haṭhapradīpikā 2.72-80 for the locus classicus of all descriptions of kevalakumbhaka.

¹¹⁷This kumbhaka is "accompanied" (sahita) because, unlike kevalakumbhaka, it is still accompanied by inhalation and exhalation. Cf. Haṭhapradīpikā 2.73.

¹¹⁸Cf. Yogasiddhāntacandrikā 2.51: evambhūta ubhayoḥ śvāsaprasāvāsayor gativicchedaś caturthaḥ prāṇāyāma ity arthaḥ | etena sahitakumbhakaḥ evāsyā 'sādhāraṇam | yadā nāḍīviśuddhiḥ syād yoginastattvaadarśinaḥ | tadā vidhvastadoṣasya bhavet kevalasambhavaḥ ||

The yogin who masters kevalakumbhaka can hold his breath for any length of time.¹¹⁹ Nārāyaṇatīrtha then quotes seven of the eight *kumbhakas*¹²⁰ of Haṭhapradīpikā (except plāvaṇī, cf. Haṭhapradīpikā 2.71).¹²¹ Then the other seven kumbhakas already mentioned in the commentary to 1.54 are explained in more detail.¹²² The commentary to 2.50 then quotes further explanations from various texts, such as Yogabhāskara, Nandipurāṇa and Mārkaṇḍeyapurāṇa on the subject of prāṇāyāma. In addition, the four stages (avasthā) of yoga practice – ārambha, ghāṭa, paricaya and niṣpatti are introduced,¹²³ etc.¹²⁴

The Haṭhayoga of Nārāyaṇatīrtha thus consists primarily of two of the four main classical categories of Haṭhayoga according to the *Haṭhapradīpikā*¹²⁵ – āsana and kumbhaka, which are located in Pātāñjalayoga. The third main category of Haṭhayoga after the Haṭhapradīpikā, namely mudrā, is also found in the Yogasiddhāntacandrikā. However, surprisingly, the mudrās, together with the śatkarmas, are only taught in the context of Karmayoga. Surprisingly, because mudrā and śatkarma are the elements of Haṭhayoga that form the main distinguishing feature from other Yoga systems. Nārāyaṇatīrtha is not unaware of this. At the end of his section on Karmayoga, he mentions them belonging to Haṭhayoga, but nonetheless decides to present them in the context of Karmayoga. These will, therefore, only be dealt with in the corresponding sub-chapter of this work. The fourth main category of the Haṭhapradīpikā, nādānusandhāna, is not found in the Yogasiddhāntacandrikā.

Haṭhayoga in the Sarvāṅgayogapradīpikā

In the Sarvāṅgayogapradīpikā (3.1-52), Haṭhayoga is both an individual category (3.1-12) and a superordinate category. In the following, Haṭhayoga is primarily discussed as the individual category. As a superordinate category, it subsumes three other Yogas, namely Rājayoga (3.13-24), Lakṣayoga (3.25-36) and Aṣṭāṅgayoga (3.37-52). These subcategories will be only briefly characterised in this chapter. They are then discussed in detail in the respective chapter according to the order of the list of the fifteen Yogas of the Yogatattvabindu.¹²⁶

Sundardās initially locates Haṭhayoga within the Ādinātha tradition and specifies the union of sun and moon as its definition.¹²⁷

This is followed by describing the ideal environment for Yoga practice, short practice instructions and dietary rules (3.2-8). These are very reminiscent of the explanations in the first chapter of Haṭhapradīpikā.¹²⁸ The chapter concludes with the naming of the six actions (ṣaṭkarmas). Due to the lack of details in his descriptions, it is hardly comprehensible to perform the practices without a teacher or other instructive texts. Sundardās could not have conceived his text as an instruction manual. Instead, his primary aim must have been to list and characterise the respective Yogas.

The ideal environment for Haṭhayoga is in a well-governed country where justice prevails. Here, the yogin is supposed to build a hut (maṭhikā) with a small door and no holes. The yogin shall smear the hut with cow dung for this purpose. A small well is dug into the ground next to the hut.^{129 130}

The yogin is supposed to sit in the hut, devote himself to Haṭhayoga and regulate the breath.¹³¹ Accordingly, for Sundardās, as in all texts with complex Yoga taxonomies without exception, breath cultivation is the central element of Haṭhayoga. In the following, he specifies the practice of Yoga postures

Specifically mustard, sesame, alcohol, meat, green vegetables, ginger and garlic, shall be avoided, too.¹³⁵ A diet of rice, milk,¹³⁶ ghee, honey and gourd vegetables is recommenced. Furthermore, clear water is supposed to be ingested.¹³⁷ When the Haṭhayogin eats in this way, his body is freed from disease.¹³⁸

Verses 3.9–11 mention the six actions (ṣaṭkarmas) – dhauti, basti, neti, trāṭaka, naulī and kapālabhātī. They are supposed to purify the channels,¹³⁹ and lead to success.¹⁴⁰ In the last verse of this section, we learn that the power of Haṭhayoga leads to bliss.¹⁴¹

As already mentioned at the beginning, Sundardās also subsumes Rājajayoga (3.13–24), Lakṣayoga (3.25–36) and Aṣṭāṅgayoga (3.37–52) under the superordinate category Haṭhayoga. Sundardās's Rājajayoga practice is for him what is commonly known as vajrolīmudrā.¹⁴² Lakṣayoga, a practice found in all complex late medieval taxonomies, is the fixation of the gaze (drṣṭi) on differently located points or objects inside or outside the body. In the context of Aṣṭāṅgayoga, the generally known eight limbs are then discussed individually. Similar to Nārāyaṇatīrtha, characteristic practices of Haṭhyoga such as āsanas, kumbhakas, murdās and bandhas are assigned to the individual limbs. A detailed comparative discussion of the subcategories takes place in the following chapters.

¹³² Ibid. 3.5ab: haṭhi kari āsana sādhaṁ bhāi hatha kari nidrā tajatau jāi |

¹³³ Ibid. 3.7b: prāta sanāna upāsana koī | What this might have looked like is described in great detail within the first chapter of the Yogakarṇikā.

¹⁴² The verses do not specify the term, but the practice is identical

5. Karmayoga

Der Begriff Karmayoga, ist im formellen Diskurs vor allem aus der *Bhagavadgītā*¹⁴³ bekannt. In den vier komplexen spätmittelalterlichen Taxonomien der 12-15 Yogas taucht er im Yogatattvabindu an fünfter Stelle, in der Yogasvarodaya und Yogasiddhāntacandrikā an dritter Stelle auf. In der Sarvāṅgayogapradīpikā ist Karmayoga nicht genannt. Karmayoga erscheint folglich nur innerhalb der Taxonomien mit 15 Yogas.

Karmayoga in the Yogatattvabindu and Yogasvarodaya

In beiden Texten fällt der Begriff Karmayoga trotz seiner Nennung in den Eingangs präsentierten Listen nicht mehr. Diese Abwesenheit überrascht den Leser, da die Struktur des Textes, beginnend mit einer Liste und dann der Behandlung einzelner Yogas, die Erwartung weckt, dass alle in der Liste genannten Subtypen des Yoga behandelt werden. Besonders bemerkenswert ist, dass Kriyāyoga, als erster Eintrag in der Liste, auch als erster abgehandelt wird, und die folgenden Abschnitte des Textes weitgehend der Reihenfolge der Liste entsprechen, sodass diese Erwartung bestärkt wird. Diese erwartete Struktur verliert sich jedoch im Laufe des Textes immer weiter. Hieraus ergeben sich zwei Erklärungsmodelle. Entweder diene die Liste lediglich der Illustration der Vielfalt der verschiedenen Kategorien des Yoga und es bestand niemals die Absicht der Autoren alle Yogas abzuhandeln, oder die Überlieferung des Textes ist der Verderbnis anheimgefallen. Die Analyse der Texte verdeutlichte, dass Rāmacandra zumindest die erste Hälfte und ebenfalls große Teile der zweiten Hälfte des Textes auf der Yogasvarodaya basiert¹⁴⁴ und fast ausnahmslos der Struktur folgt, wie sie aus den Zitaten des Yogasvarodaya in der Prāṇatoṣinī vorgegeben ist. Wir wissen aber auch, dass die Überlieferung der Prāṇatoṣinī keineswegs vollständig ist. Viele der Verse des Yogasvarodaya, die sich in der Prāṇatoṣinī finden, können auch in der Yogakarnīkā nachgewiesen werden. Darüber hinaus beinhaltet die Yogakarnīkā eine nicht zu vernachlässigende Menge an Versen, die sich nicht im Prāṇatoṣinī finden, aber dennoch dem ¹⁴³Cf. for example Bhagavadgītā 2.47-49, 3.1-7, & 4.20. Hier ist Karmayoga ein Weg (marga) zu Befreiung (mokṣa) durch Handeln ohne Anhaftung an sein Taten.

¹⁴⁴In der zweiten Hälfte seines Textes verwendet Rāmacandra zusätzlich häufig Inhalte und Verse aus der ssplonavlā.

Yogasvarodaya zugeschrieben werden.¹⁴⁵ Daraus ergibt sich, dass die Überlieferung der Yogasvarodaya nur anhand der Verse der Prāṇatoṣinī und der Yogakarnikā unmöglich vollständig sein kann und der ursprüngliche Text möglicherweise auch die nicht in den Zitaten erwähnten anderen fünfzehn Yogas beschrieb. Die strukturelle Analyse beider Texte offenbart im Kontext von Karmayoga einen gewichtigen Hinweis auf Verderbnis in der Überlieferung.

Dieser Hinweis findet sich in Sektion XLI. Die Sektion beschäftigt sich, genau wie die vorangehenden Sektionen beginnend mit XXXII mit den mikrokosmischen Equivalenten des Makrokosmos im yogischen Körper. Hier geht es insbesondere um die Auflistung diverser Inhalte des yogischen Körpers wie siebenundzwanzig Sterne, zwölf Tierkreiszeichen, neun Planeten, die fluktuation der Ūrmi, welche den Körper in Bewegung setzt, unzählige Gottheiten die den Poren der Arme innewohnen, himmlische Askten (divyatapasvins) in den Poren des Rückens, usw.

Dann wechselt das Thema abrupt. Sowohl im Yogatattvabindu als auch in der Yogasvarodaya findet sich plötzlich eine Passage die mukti durch karma beschreibt, ohne eine entsprechende vorangehende Einleitung. Rāmacandra, prosaisiert offenbar, wie so oft, einfach die Inhalte der Yogasvarodaya. Das strukturelle Problem des Textes geht daher auf das Yogasvarodaya zurück. Der inhaltliche Wechsel ist so abrupt, dass offenbar eines oder mehrere Folios des Exemplars eines Archetypen auf dem der noch erhaltene Text letztendlich basierte, verloren gegangen sein könnten. Bei diesem Textabschnitt, welches die Sektion XLI beschließt, könnte es sich, durch den abrupten Themenwechsel, durchaus um Teile einer ursprünglich vorhandenen Beschreibung von Karmayoga handeln.

Das Yogasvarodaya (PT, Ed. p. 843-44) liest:

samagradarśanān muktaḥ svargabhogañ ca matsukham |
tad etac cintayā yāti rogaśokavivarjjitaḥ ||

¹⁴⁵Überraschenderweise sind die Inhalte der Verse des Yogasvarodaya in der Yogakarnikā auch nicht Yogatattvabindu nachweisbar. Bedeutet dies das das Yogatattvabindu die Zitate der Prāṇatoṣinī als Vorlage nutzte? Dies ist unmöglich, da die Prāṇatoṣinī aus dem 19. Jh. stammt. Wahrscheinlich gab es mehrere Rezensionen des Yogasvarodaya.

*yat karmā karmaṇā śaṅkā manomadhye bhaved vahiḥ |
tat karmākaraṇam¹⁴⁶ muktir ity āha bhagavān śivaḥ |*

As a result of complete vision¹⁴⁷ one is liberated from heavenly pleasures and happiness. By means of contemplating that one reaches freedom from sorrow and disease. Whatever action creates concern within the mind by [considering] the action, externally the non-execution of that [very] action brings about liberation. Thus says the exalted Śiva.

Die Prosaisierung dieser Passage im Yogatattvabindu lautet:

*puruṣasya nṛtyadarśanāt || gītaśravaṇāt || vallabhavastuno darśanāt || ya
ānanda utpadyate saḥ svargalokaḥ kathyate | rogapiḍito durjanebhyaḥ pu-
ruṣasya yad duḥkhaṁ utpadyate | tad bahutaraṁ narakam kathyate | atha
ca yatkarmakaraṇāt sarveṣāṁ lokānāṁ svamanasi ca śubhaṁ na bharete tat karma bandhanam ity ucyate | atha ca yatkarmakaraṇān manomadhye
śaṅkā na bhavati tat karma muktikāraṇam |*

Whatsoever bliss is generated as a result of witnessing dance, listening to songs, [and] viewing beloved objects, that is called heaven. The suffering which arises for a person afflicted by disease or by bad persons is considered a very great hell. Moreover, as a result of performing actions that do not bring about happiness in all worlds and in one's own mind, is it said that this [very] action is binding. Furthermore, from whatever action within the mind concern does not arise, that action becomes the cause for liberation.

Eine Extrapolation des vollständigen Konzeptes anhand dieses hypotetischen Überbleibels eines Karmayoga ist unmöglich. Klar ist jedoch, dass hier, auch wenn es nicht Karmayoga genannt wird, ein Weg zur Befreiung durch spezifische Handlungen (karmas) dargelegt wird. In der Yogasvarodaya sind dies alle Handlungen, welche keine Sorgen bereiten. Im Yogatattvabindu scheint dies die Kultivierungen aller Handlungen zu sein, die einen glücklich machen und der Verzicht auf Handlungen, welche zu Sorgen führen. Gleichzeitig ist diese Passage ein erneuter Hinweis auf Rāmacandra's wohlhabendes und genußorientiertes Publikum. Es lässt sich weiterhin eine radikaler Kontrast zum "klassischen" Karmyoga der Bhagavadgītā verzeichnen. Nicht mehr die Nicht-Anhanfung an die Handlung steht im Vordergrund, sondern Handlungen die zu Glück führen.

¹⁴⁶ karmākaraṇam em.] karmakaraṇam YSv (PT).

¹⁴⁷ It seems very unlikely to me that this samagradarśanāt refers back to the previously mentioned microcosmic contents of the macrocosm. Especially given the following statements about karma. To what it refers to is unclear.

Karmayoga in the Yogasiddhāntacandrikā

Nārāyaṇatīrtha situiert sein Karmayoga im Kontext seines Kommentares zu sūtra 2.28:

yogāṅgānuṣṭhānād aśuddhikṣaye jñānadiptir āvivekakhyāteḥ || 28 ||

As a result of the practice of the limbs of Yoga upon the destruction of impurities, the lamp of knowledge up to the realisation of discrimination arises.

Dieses sūtra leitet eine Beschreibung der acht berühmten Glieder des Pātāñjalayoga ein. Nārāyaṇatīrtha erklärt hierzu, dass die Praxis der acht Glieder zur Realisierung des übergeordneten Ziels des Yoga, der unterscheidenen Erkenntnis zwischen puruṣa und prakṛti führt, die Unwissenheit (vidyā) hierdurch entfernt wird und sich hierdurch Befreiung manifestiert.

Karmayoga wird im Folgenden als Alternative dargestellt:

athavā yogāṅgānām dhautivastityādiṣaṭkarmanām mahāmudrādīnām ca anuṣṭhānād dṛḍhābhyāsaj jñānadiptiḥ jñāyate'neneti jñānam karaṇavar-gaḥ | tasya diptiḥ rogādyanabhighātena tejasvitā dṛḍhatā ca, āvivekakhyāteḥ vivekakhyātiparyantaḥ bhavaty arthaḥ | rogādīnā jñānasya kuṇṭhabhāvas tu prasiddha eva sa caiteṣv aṅgeṣv anuṣṭhiteṣu rogapratibandhān na bhavaty arthaḥ | tathā ca karaṇādārḍhyadvārā samādhidārḍhyārthārthakarmayogo 'pi prathamato 'nuṣṭheyo rogabhīruṇeti bhāvaḥ | sa ca karmayogaḥ ṣaṭkarmarūpo mudrārūpaś ceti dvividho nirūpita ākare yathā |

Alternatively, through the execution of the consistent practice of the limbs of yoga being the six acitions like dhauti vasti etc. and mahāmudrā etc. the lamp of knowledge arises. By this jnāna (knowledge), the group of sense organs is meant. Its dipti(lamp) through the absense of damage by diseases etc. becomes brilliant and strong. The meaning of āvivekakhyāteḥ (up to realisation of discrimination) is extending as far as the realisation of discrimination. The meaning is - by diseases etc. the state of inefficiency of knowledge (here, the sense organs) is well known. And after having practiced these limbs, obstacles from diseases do not arises anymore. And thus, the means for aquiring resilience of the sense organs is Karmayoga for the purpose of steadfastness of Samādhi, which shall be practiced first particularly with regard to the state of being afraid of disease. And this Karmayoga, in form of the six actions and in form of the seals was discussed as twofold accordingly.
