Whether one is wearing new clothes made of silk, or old, worn [clothes] with holes, whether [one is] smeared with sandalwood and musk, or smeared with mud—when delight and grief do not reside within the mind, it is that which is Rājayoga. When the mind is neither bored nor overwhelmed situated in a city, a forest, an uninhabited village or a village full of people, also this is Rājayoga.

[XVIII. Caryāyoga]

Now, Caryāyoga is explained.¹ Formless, permanent, immovable [and] unsplittable—such is the self. For whose mind remains steady in such a self, his self does not come into contact with sin and merit. Just as contact with water does not arise for the lotus leaf situated in water, likewise in the [case of the] self. When the mind is absorbed into the formless, in the same way as the wind wanders according to its own will in space, only that is Caryāyoga.²

¹Caryāyoga is absent in the YSv (PT and YK). Rāmacandra uses a passage from the YSv's section on Rājayoga to construct this subtype of yoga (cf. PT, p. 835: nityollāse ... samo 'pi ca |). Its brevity suggests an attempt to match the initial list of yogas. The passage does not clarify why he employs the term caryā°. Its inclusion among the fifteen yogas reflects the four pādas of the Śaiva Āgamas (kriyā-, jñāna-, caryā-, and yogapāda). However, there is no connection to ritual conduct/discipline of Śaiva practices. Perhaps, in this context, the concept of caryā° = $\sqrt{\text{car}}$ + kṛt-suffix -yā f. might express the action, which refers to the meaning “wandering, roaming” of the verbal root $\sqrt{\text{car}}$, which Rāmacandra brings up in his description.

²Parallels to Rāmacandra's innovative Caryāyoga can be identified in the texts with similar taxonomies. In Yogasiddhāntacandrikā (Ed. pp. 2, 52–53, 100–101, 150) Nārāyaṇatīrtha presents Caryāyoga in the context of Yogasūtra 1.33. According to Nārāyaṇatīrtha's commentary, the practice of this involves the cultivation of specific mental attitudes, such as maitrī (“loving-kindness”), karuṇā (“compassion”), muditā (“compassionate joy”) and upekṣā (“equanimity”), towards circumstances characterised by happiness, suffering, virtue and vice. Sundardās, in his Sarvāṅgayogapradīpikā (2.40–51, Ed. pp. 96–98), describes the similar sounding Cārcāyoga as a type of bhaktiyoga that is bhakti towards the unmanifest consciousness (avyakta puruṣa) in rapturous devotion. According to Sundardās, the unmanifest consciousness (avyakta puruṣa) is formless, eternal, etc. (40). However, in Sanskrit and brājhbhāṣā the term means “discussion”. Thus Caryāyoga and Cārcāyoga are unrelated. An analysis of Caryāyoga can be examined on p. ??.

3.1 Figures

Figure 3: The dehasvarūpa of ajapāgāyatrī. The image, reminiscent of a hippogriff, is part of an illustrated Sanskrit manuscript written in the Śāradā script. Preserved as a single large scroll under Acc. No. 1334 at the Oriental Institute in Srinagar (Kashmir), it is entitled Nāḍīcakra. The manuscript contains a depiction of the yogic body's cakras and nāḍīs. The text surrounding the figure closely corresponds to the additional material found in manuscript U₂ of the Tattvayogabindu. The manuscript reads (diplomatic transcription): oṃ daśame pūrṇagiriṇīthe lalāṭamaṇḍale candro devatā amṛtāsaktiḥ paramātmā ṛṣiḥ dvāvīṃśaddalāni amṛtavāsīnikalā 4: ambikā 1 lambikā 2 gha(m)ṭkā 3 tālikā 4 dehasvarūpaṃ kākamukhaṃ 1 naranetraṃ 2 gośṛṅgaṃ 3 lalāṭabrahmapara 4 hayagrīvā 5 mayūramuśchaṃ 6 haṃsacārītāni 7 sthāna.
